Tired Old Horse, Plodding a Road:

In her admirable biography of Winston Churchill, Virginia Cowles recalls that at the time the British statesman (then out of power) was opposing the folly of Neville Chamberlain's appeasement of Hitler, he commented at lunch one day:

"Mr. Chamberlain can't seem to realize we live in a wicked world," he said. "English people want to be left alone, and I dare say a great many other people want to be left alone, too. But the world is like a tired old horse plodding down a long road. Every time it strays off and tries to graze peacefully in some nice, green pasture, along comes a new master to flog it a bit further on."

Many would-be masters today are seeking to flog the tired old horse as it seeks to find a way into a very small pasture of a Korean truce, where the grass does not grow very well. Beyond it, of course, is a somewhat greener field of a Korean peace, though grazing in it, it attained, will be precarious and painful because of the burs, thistles and thorns.

Water Hole?

We likely will have some sort of "peace" or "settlement," but it will be somewhat like the truce declared by wild animals in the African jungle where, as we learn from stories by the great hunters, the water hole is a sort of neutral ground to which all animals come with cautious, wind-sniffing care, always on the alert.

One of Churchill's great contributions is that he has been urging a Korean truce, unrelated to other problems in Asia because he knows a full settlement now is impossible.

The American plan, calling for a series of "deeds" by the Communists to prove their good intentions, has been wisely and properly abandoned by President Eisenhower who has earned Mr. Churchill's praise for a very real contribution to the "peace-meal" approach to the major problem.

We hear often today the word "realistic." It is a handy word, used to shore up one's own concept of what sort of decision is needed. To one it is "realistic" to call off all the Korean problem by getting out. To another, it is "realistic" to go to war and attempt to conquer China. To still another, it is "realistic" to accept the cost of stalemate, take a truce and try for a small peace with hopes it will grow.

Realistic

But, certainly it must be apparent to all who wish a realistic view that no Bermuda conference, followed by a "high-level" meeting including a Russian representative, will bring about a complete settlement of the great forces loose in the world. Like all such tremendous historical pressures they will be resolved only with the passing of time—perhaps a century or so. Others, of no greater force, have required that much time—and more.

The vast differences between the areas of the world called "East" and "West" are too great to be ended, with any finality, by a high-level meeting, or a series of them.

But, to return to the analogy of the jungle water hole, we can, by patience, perhaps attain a status which will enable us to live side by side, but not without fear and strain and the necessity for constant alertness.

Douglas' Ruling On Rosenbergs Expected Today

By LUTHER A. HUSTON

WASHINGTON, June 16—The fight to save Julius and Ethel Rosenberg from death in the electric chair was waged in high places in Washington today. The couple has been sentenced to die in Sing Sing prison on Thursday for betraying secrets of the atom bomb to Russia.

PONDERS PLEA
Justice Douglas

Interest centered in the day-long consideration given by Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court to a plea for a stay of execution. The plea was formally presented to the justice at 10 a. m.

Shortly before 10 p. m. (Atlanta time), a court clerk announced Douglas still had not completed his study of the plea. No decision would be forthcoming before 10 a. m. tomorrow, the announcement said.

CLERGYMEN INTERVENE

Four clergymen also pleaded with President Eisenhower to save the lives of the condemned spies. The Rev. Daniel Ridout, Negro secretary of the Baltimore area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, said after the conference that the President had indicated he would not commute the sentence.

Emanuel H. Bloch, principal attorney for the Rosenbergs, filed at the Department of Justice late this afternoon a petition for executive clemency. Bloch said that the understanding with Daniel H. Lyons, pardon attorney, was that the petition would not be processed, that is, it would not be sent to the White House, until all available judicial recourse had been exhausted.

BUZZ WITH ACTIVITY

On the diplomatic front, the Polish embassy moved in with an offer by the Polish government of asylum for the Rosenbergs if the United States would lift the death sentence and permit them to go to that country.

The marble corridors of the Supreme Court building normally would have been deserted, except for a few straggling tourists, to-

Parole Denied Harvey; 1954 Hearing Set

Leland Harvey, one of the most notorious criminals and prison escape artists in Georgia's history, was denied parole Tuesday by the State Pardon and Parole Board, which announced it would reconsider Harvey's case in May, 1954.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Harvey had been transferred from Tattall State Prison at Reidsville to the Wayne County prison branch at Jesup and has been made a "trustee."

Chairman Charles A. Pannell of the Pardon and Parole Board and Director of Corrections Robert E. Warren said Harvey will have a chance as a trustee to prove his stability before being considered again for parole.

Harvey has been in and out of prison since the 1930s when his partner in crime was Aubrey Smith who died a few days ago in a Florida prison.

Book Commission Called A Threat to a Free Press

The American Book Publishers Council charged at a public hearing Tuesday that the existence of the Georgia Literature Commission is "a threat to a free press," and declared the legislative act which created the commission is unconstitutional.

Morris Abram, Atlanta attorney representing the council of 106 book publishing companies, said the commission is an "irregular and extrajudicial court" that is intimidating booksellers.

He further charged that the commission is "wholly unnecessary" for the enforcement of laws against publication of obscenity. The commission, he added, "no matter how well intentioned, will curtail liberty without reducing obscenity."

ASSAULTS CENSORSHIP

"Censorship has a sad history," Abram declared. "There is not a bright chapter in its past and there is no future for it in a free state."

Chairman James L. Wesberry and Hubert Dyar, members of the commission, just as vigorously defended its activities, however, and were joined by Samuel Rothberg, Atlanta real estate man.

"The commission has no power to ban any publication, nor does it have the power to censor, regardless of the widespread reports to the contrary," Dyar declared.

"NOTHING TO HIDE" Dyar and Wesberry said the commission has held eight meetings, seven of which were attended by the press and added that the press was invited to the eighth meeting.

"The commission has nothing to hide," Dyar said. It has withheld the names of publications adjudged obscene, on advice of the attorney general, he declared, but all its meetings are open to the public and there are no "secret meetings."

Abram argued that the commission does have the power to ban books and said tyranny can be masked behind the excuse of a fight against obscenity.

U. S. Steel Boosts Price $4 Per Ton

PITTSBURGH, June 16—U. S. Steel Corp. raised its prices $4 a ton today in the first of a series of industry price announcements that will boost the country's steel bill by an estimated $324,000,000 a year.

The price increase followed by only five days an 8 1/2-cent-per-hour wage increase granted members of the United Steelworkers (CIO). Throughout the negotiations with the 1,200,000-member union, industry officials had warned that pay increases would be followed by a price increase.

Industry sources estimated that with approximately 12 per cent of the nation's steel production going into defense products, the price boost would add $38,880,000 to the country's defense bill.

Other major producers which followed U. S. Steel into the new wage agreement with the USW last Friday were expected to make similar price announcements quickly, with some coming tomorrow.

The effect of the boost on consumer items was not indicated immediately.

A Ford Motor Co. spokesman said last week that "Something will have to be done somewhere if steel prices go up again."

Spot estimates in the manufacture of an average automobile containing about 3,500 pounds of steel give an approximate $7 increase in production cost at the minimum.

The announcement from U. S. Steel said the increase, which will boost the price of carbon steel to $120 a ton, would be effective with shipments as of 12:01 a. m. June 17, in all its operating divisions.

Seamen's Union Issues 'No Pact, No Work' Edict

NEW YORK, Wednesday, June 17—The CIO National Maritime Union early today issued a "no contract, no work" edict that presages slow paralysis of American flag shipping in the Atlantic and Gulf waters.

Actually, union contracts covering nearly 500 passenger, dry cargo ships and ocean-going tankers ran out Monday night. The NMU held its fire, however, in compliance with federal mediators' requests.

Already "seriously deadlocked" with the passenger and cargo ship operators, NMU President Joseph Curran left a tanker negotiation to announce just before midnight that wages and working conditions for 40,000 unionists were "undetermined."

ROK Counterattack Roars On; Atlantan Put on Truce Team

Finch Named; UN Flies Out 2,500 in Day

Compiled From Wire Services
TOKYO, June 17—Announcement that Maj. George G. Finch of Atlanta will be a member of the United Nations command delegation was made here Wednesday, following a 20-minute meeting of the main Korean truce negotiators.

While Communist loudspeakers at the fighting fronts blared a prediction an armistice will be signed June 25, a UN command spokesman said the chief delegates would meet again at the call of either side.

CLARK ORDER

Maj. Gen. Finch, who left his Atlanta residence last Thursday under secret orders, was announced by Gen. Mark Clark, UN supreme commander, as the successor to Brig. Gen. Edgar E. Glenn on the UN command delegation.

Finch and Glenn are Air Force officers.

Major General Finch will go immediately to Korea, it was reported here. He arrived in Japan Monday from Mitchell Field, Long Island, where he is in charge of headquarters of the Continental Air Command.

An attorney in private life, General Finch enlisted in the Air Corps in 1918. After World War I he remained in the Reserve Corps until 1942 when he enrolled in the British Middle East command staff school.

Glenn will return to the United States for retirement in July after 36 years in the service.

TOLL CLIMBS

As the truce teams met and recessed, it was disclosed that Allied casualties in the bloody 11th hour battles on Korea's East Central front have reached the highest level since the Allied retreat from North Korea in December of 1950.

Far East Air Forces headquarters said that its evacuation planes on Tuesday handled "the highest number of wounded."

2 Polio Suspects Enter Grady as State Total Rises

Two children were admitted to Grady Hospital as polio suspects Tuesday as Dr. W. J. Murphy, state epidemiologist, reported 53 cases of the disease in Georgia so far this year, compared with 37 for the corresponding period last year.

The children were listed as Linda Jane Roberts, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts of Austell, and Robert Lee Samples Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Samples of Rt. 3, Lithonia.

Dr. Murphy said a higher polio incidence has been reported throughout the country, but could make no prediction about a possible epidemic.

Wilson Sees No Stepup By Allies

By AUSTIN STEVENS
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, June 16—Secretary of Defense Wilson, speaking hopefully Tuesday of a Korean truce, declared that United Nations forces were hardly going to intensify their battle effort with peace a possibility. He suggested the Communist battle pressure might be deliberately aimed at impressing Republic of Korea forces.

Wilson also told a news conference he didn't see any merit in the compromise Air Force budget figures submitted to the Senate armed services subcommittee Monday by Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff.

Although the Air Force's "top minimum" represented a severely scaled-down sum from that previously defended before Congress, Wilson declared that, after looking Vandenberg's message over very carefully:

"I saw nothing in it to change my recommendations now before the Congress."

Vandenberg, at the committee's request, said that in the light of other restrictions placed upon the Air Force's build up in areas other than aircraft procurement, $1,435,000,000 added to the administration revised budget would permit the Air Force "to continue at an orderly rate toward the 143-wing program."

The Air Force had asked for new appropriations of $16,778,000,000 in the Truman budget. The Eisenhower administration reduced this figure by $5,090,000,000.

Reds Slowed By First Big Thrust Back

By ROBERT VERMILLION

TOKYO, Wednesday, June 17—South Korean troops reported lost ground at both ends of the "bulge" in the main Allied defense line today in their first major counter-attack against the Communist break-through on the east central Korean front.

Troops of the South Korean 20th Division recaptured "M-1" hill and stormed to the crest of Christmas Hill at the eastern end of the 15-mile bulge, and fought back into two lost positions near finger ridge on the western end.

RIDGE NOT CLEARED

The South Korean 2nd Corps reported erroneously that Finger Ridge had been recaptured, but American Maj. Robert Peden, of Columbus, Ga., advisor to the South Korean 8th Division, made it clear that the ridge itself was not in Allied hands.

Finger Ridge is one of three pivotal hills guarding the "hinge" of the new Allied line. It was captured by the Reds Tuesday.

South Korean forces captured the crest of Christmas Hill after a four-hour fight with the aid of fresh troops of the 20th Division.

The fighting was the bloodiest in two years of the "static" war along the 155-mile battlefield. The toll in dead and wounded was heavy on both sides.

OFF ELSEWHERE

Ground fighting was reported falling off on the fronts north and northwest of Kumwha, while the western front was reported almost completely quiet.

Front dispatches said the big Chinese drive, employing up to 40,000 men was slowed almost to a halt by stubborn South Korean troops and tons of shells and bombs from Allied guns and warplanes.

South Korean officers expressed the belief that the huge Chinese force was running out of supplies.

Red warplanes struck the Allies yesterday, bombing a 30-acre fuel dump at Inchon into a mass of flames in the most successful enemy air raid of the war.

Mercury Slated For 90; Then Fall To 80's Thursday

Warmer weather Wednesday will send the mercury up to 90 degrees, but temperatures will fall back to the eighties Thursday, the weatherman predicts.

The Atlanta Weather Bureau's forecast for Atlanta and North Georgia is "partly cloudy skies and warmer Wednesday, and partly cloudy and not so warm Thursday."

Temperatures are expected to range between 68 and 90 degrees Wednesday, and 70 and 86 degrees Thursday. Tuesday's extremes were 66 and 86.

Trapped 370 Feet Below Harbor, Sandhog Rescued After 5 Hours

BOSTON, June 16—Facing engulfment by the sea, a stocky sandhog lay motionless for five pain-racked hours under mud and timbers today — fearful his slightest movement would bring death to rescuers as they dug him free of a tunnel cave-in 370 feet beneath Boston Harbor.

Throughout the ordeal, Joseph (Muscles) Romikitis, 37, of Cohasset, Mass., was literally holding up the floor of the harbor with a huge timber that had fallen along with tons of rock and earth on his right leg.

"I didn't dare move it," Romikitis said when carried to the surface. "I was afraid the whole thing would come down and we'd all be buried alive."

Romikitis and another sandhog, Sherman Dodd, 22, of Boston, were shoring up the head of the mile-long tunnel being built by the Metropolitan District Commission to carry sewage to Deer Island in the harbor when the cave-in occurred at 6:10 a. m. Fourteen other members of the crew further back in the tunnel were unhurt.

Both the injured men were described in "good" condition later by Massachusetts General Hospital authorities.

Rescuers reached Dodd first and heard Romikitis moaning on the other side of the tunnel.

Ralph Holder, 38, and Charles Fargos, 32, cleared the muck away from Romikitis' face so he could breathe. The cave-in had reduced the 10-foot tunnel to a two-foot hole.

Digging with their hands, Holder and Fargos finally reached the heavy beam pinning Romikitis. A hydraulic jack was brought in to lift it. Frantic moments later, after the jack was in place, the beam inched upward and Romikitis was free.

Sen. Hennings Asks Deeds on 'Burning'

By LEE GARRETT

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—Sen. Hennings (D-Mo.) called on President Eisenhower today to back up with action his speech criticizing "book burners"—a speech which Sen. McCarran (D-Nev.) attacked as "a pitiful thing."

GOP CONTROL

Hennings told the Senate today that the "current campaign to burn books is at present completely in the control of the Eisenhower administration," and expressed hope it "will end this medieval exhibitionism with firmness and finality."

He obviously referred—as many thought Eisenhower did—to the demand by Sen. McCarthy, acceded to by the State Department, for removal from overseas information libraries of books by Communists and fellow travelers.

But McCarthy told newsmen the President "couldn't very well have been referring to me. I have burned no books."

The senator said he has read a text of the speech and "it's impossible to know to whom he was referring."

He said removal of the books has been ordered by members of Eisenhower's own administration and "obviously he agrees with what his Cabinet officers are doing or he would countermand their orders."

"I'm happy," McCarthy added, "that the administration apparently agrees with me and is removing them."

By book burning, Hennings said, he meant "any effort to remove books from libraries."

NAZI BURNING
Hennings said such action is especially regrettable in Germany, where many of the criticized books have been found, "because Germany under the Nazis had a particularly virulent history of book burning. So has Soviet Russia."

"Book burning" in all its forms is a totalitarian device," he said, "to reinforce the authoritarian control of the state."

But McCarran, a member of a Senate group which has been searching for Communist influence in schools and colleges, took a different line of attack.

He told newsmen the President "showed no knowledge of his subject. It's too bad a man in his position doesn't know more about it. Someone must have sold him a bill of goods."

Got $19,000 To Reform, Jailed Anew

HOUSTON, June 16 (AP)—Alton Franks, 19-year-old ex-convict whose cell mate gave him $19,000 to go straight, today was sentenced to 30 days in jail on a pistol carrying charge.

Franks was accused of swearing at a state highway patrolman who told of finding the pistol and of beating his wife for not hiding it.

Defense Attorney Lawrence Armin filed a motion for a new trial, and Franks remained free under $400 bond.

Franks last week was fined $40 after entering pleas of guilty to three traffic violations. Armin appealed each case. The tickets resulted from the June 2 arrest and another traffic arrest June 10.

The story of the $19,000 gift was told by the teen-ager after his June 2 arrest. J. C. Henderson, Tornillo rancher serving a 50-year sentence for murder, later confirmed he had made the gift and was convinced the money would help Franks "go straight." Franks was released from prison May 18.

Justice Unit Said Firing Prosecutor Who Probed St. Louis Tax Scandal

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—A role in a grand jury investigation of scandals in the St. Louis Internal Revenue Bureau office in 1951.

Slack was sent to St. Louis by J. Howard McGrath, then attorney general. After Slack appeared before the grand jury, it returned a partial report giving a clean bill of health to the handling of tax cases by the revenue bureau.

Federal District Judge George H. Moore called the report "astonishing." The judge eventually made a new charge to the grand jury, which then returned 33 indictments. Slack denied before a House subcommittee that he instigated the partial report, but the subcommittee said he became a party to the report by calling it "splendid."

He came under criticism for his

St. Lawrence Seaway Bill Approved by Senate Group

WASHINGTON, June 16 (UP)—The Senate foreign relations committee today overwhelmingly approved the hotly-disputed St. Lawrence seaway bill providing for a joint U. S.-Canadian project to open the Great Lakes to ocean commerce.

Chairman Alexander Wiley (Rep., Wis.), said the vote on the bill, which has the warm endorsement of President Eisenhower and the bitter opposition of powerful industrial interests, was 13 to 2. Senators George (Dem., Ga.), and J. William Fulbright (Dem., Ark.), voted against it.

The bill would provide a 27-foot channel to the lakes by way of the St. Lawrence, with most of the dredging and construction work centered in the river's International Rapids area. Canada already has signaled its intention of building the project alone if this country refuses to participate.

The decision was announced after a similar bill was bottled up in the foreign relations committee last year.

The new bill was opposed by powerful railroad, coal mining and public utilities interests and there still was a big question over its chances for final congressional approval.

Senate Republican leader Taft (Ohio), promised, however, that it would be brought to the floor for a vote if it survived the committee. But a long list of "must" legislation has priority over the seaway measure in the Senate, and the House is yet to act.

Negro Group Authorized To Present Park Needs

By MARJORY SMITH

Atlanta City Council's parks committee, following a session Tuesday with representatives of two Atlanta Negro organizations which had petitioned the city to abolish segregation in use of public parks facilities here, authorized establishment of a Negro committee of three to present future park needs of Negro citizens.

The committee acted on motion of Councilman Raleigh Drennan, with Mayor Hartsfield first suggesting the special committee.

Councilmen asked B. T. Harvey, Morehouse College teacher and spokesman for 20-odd Negroes attending the Tuesday meeting, to name three Negro representatives to confer with the Parks Committee.

The committee also passed a resolution by Councilman Dowse Donaldson directing City Parks Manager George Simons to "expedite" development of three additional tennis courts in Washington Park, one of three city parks for Negroes.

In other action Tuesday the Parks Committee awarded a contract for printing of 50,000 booklets on the Atlanta Cyclorama to Higgins-McArthur Co. and recommended that City Council authorize Mayor Hartsfield to sign a contract giving the Atlanta Opera Co. free use of Chastain Memorial Park amphitheater for a series of summer concerts.

Petition of the Atlanta Tennis Club and the West Side Tennis Club, both Negro organizations, seeking to set aside city parks segregation, was made public for the first time Tuesday. Parks Manager Simons said he had withheld the petition, filed on May 23, pending the Tuesday afternoon hearing.

Fire Destroys Garage; Mechanic Is Injured

Mechanic C. R. Hawkins was doing a routine repair job on a truck engine Tuesday at the Crew Street Garage, 667 Crew St., S. W. He turned on the ignition switch. The engine exploded, starting a fire that destroyed the garage, damaged two nearby buildings, and burned Hawkins about the legs.

derway here. Hartsfield told Harvey $60,000 had been set aside for a new Negro park in the Butler-Piedmont Ave. area and that $75,000 had been allocated for a new Negro golf course.

Committee members, in approving the proposed contract for July 1-Aug. 8 light opera concerts at Chastain Park, turned down an ordinance proposed by Councilman Douglas Wood which would have prohibited use of the park amphitheater for amusement purposes "during church hours."

8th Flees Girls School; Kemper 'Not Surprised'

A 16-year-old girl—the eighth teen-ager to escape from Georgia Training School for Girls since Monday when a new administration took over—Tuesday night fled the institution after climbing down a sheet rope.

Police reports described the latest escapee as a thin, five-foot four-inch girl with blondish red hair. She was confined to the institution less than two weeks ago.

Earlier, State Welfare Director Alan Kemper had said Tuesday he wasn't greatly surprised that seven girls fled the troubled school Monday night.

Referring to escapes by more than 30 in the last three months, he added, "In my opinion, they weren't leaving before on account of mistreatment."

Five of seven who went over the fence Monday night flagged a passing automobile and rode off headed toward Atlanta, a police report said. All still were at large Tuesday.

Henry Leroy Acree, assistant to his wife, the new superintendent of the school, said the seven made a break from two buildings. The fugitives so far have snubbed an offer of the welfare director, who has general charge

Dentists Shun Fluoridation Hearing

A Fulton Board of Health hearing Thursday on the highly controversial subject, fluoridation of water, to prevent tooth decay, will not be attended by representatives of four health agencies, an Atlanta Dentist said Tuesday.

Dr. Morrison

Dr. Thad Morrison, chairman of the public health and welfare committee, Georgia Dental Association, said the dentists will not appear at the hearing "because we don't want to be held up to scorn and ridicule as we were at the City Council hearing on fluoridation."

He said the agencies had planned to file at the request of Dr. Roy McGee, director of the Fulton County Health Department, four briefs, containing scientific evidence supporting fluoridation—but the briefs will not be ready because the hearing was advanced a week.

A WEEK EARLY

"We were told," Dr. Morrison said, "that we would have until June 25 to gather evidence. Now the Board of Health is meeting a week early, and we won't have the necessary time."

Besides Dr. Morrison, those preparing briefs to support fluoridation are Dr. J. G. Williams, State Board of Health; Dr. John Critzberg, State Department of Health; and Dr. John Blier, dean of the Emory University School of Dentistry and chairman of the fluoridation committee, Northern District Dental Society.

Dr. Morrison said the dental spokesmen don't want to go to the hearing because they don't want to "get involved in a floor fight with fanatics who oppose fluoridation."

He said dentists favoring fluoridation were called "murderers" by one opponent at the City Council hearing on the controversial subject.

Dr. Morrison stressed the dent-or Chamber of Commerce. Every time fluoridation of water has been discussed publicly here, it has been the subject of heated, sometimes bitter debate by proponents and opponents. Richard Hull, chairman of the Board of Health, said meeting dates frequently are changed—and the change this month had nothing to do with the hearing on fluoridation. He said the hearing could be continued and the dentists could submit their briefs at the next Board of Health meeting.

Trade Program Dealt a Blow

It seems a simple rule of economics that a nation cannot go on forever selling more than it buys. An exchange of goods and services is a fundamental necessity of business—whether internally or between countries.

That is why we view with considerable alarm action Monday by the House of Representatives that could send us back down the road to higher and higher tariffs and eventual economic isolation. In destroying the non-partisan character of the tariff commission—a commission that is now stacked with high tariff partisans—the House has, in effect, destroyed the reciprocal trade program through the back door.

Until around the turn of this century the United States was a debtor nation. While developing our own industrial capacity, we bought more from abroad than we sold. During that period we found it expedient to lessen our unfavorable trade balances through tariff laws that made it more difficult for foreign nations to sell to us.

In this century the United States has reversed its position. Instead of being a debtor nation, we have become the greatest creditor nation of all time. We continue to sell more than we buy. When this situation has faced other nations in the past, they have found it necessary to relax restrictions to permit foreign goods to enter in order to keep their own trade flowing.

No one believes it can be done overnight. But a gradual relaxation of trade barriers would lead to unprecedented prosperity, such as we have achieved through a free interchange of goods and services in our union of 48 states.

With our high tariffs in the 1920s, we eventually froze foreign competition from the American market. That, in turn, made it impossible for foreign countries to buy our goods after their supply of dollars was exhausted. Our surpluses piled up, especially agricultural commodities, and we plunged merrily into the crash of 1929 and the world depression that followed.

In the last decade we have been equally unrealistic. Instead of permitting them to earn dollars through trade, we have been making outright gifts of billions to our allies at the expense of the American taxpayer. If we abandon that policy and continue to tighten trade restrictions, the economic consequences to us and to the world in the long run will be a worse repetition of the 1929 debacle.

With "no trade, no aid," our Allies will have no alternative except to turn to the Communist-dominated countries. Malenkov knows this. He can afford to play a waiting game while we force our friends, one by one, into his economic and political orbit.

Let Farmers Note Who's on Their Side

Let farmers note that Sen. Richard B. Russell lost another hard fight in their behalf—the battle for soil conservation. It, too, is going the way of economy although the Georgian salvaged part of it.

We "economized" for a century or so without it and woke up to find ourselves in a desperate condition with much of our soil gone and the rest of it going.

No nation has existed long that has forgotten that the source of all wealth is the land. When that is gone, all else disappears. In the short space of American history we have destroyed our resources at a greater rate than any other people have ever succeeded in doing.

We learned it wasn't economical after all to be without soil conservation practices, and government interest and assistance in them. The subsidy involved was not nearly as great as that the government has provided, and still provides for industry. But, REA, Soil Conservation, TVA and other agencies are feeling the knife increasingly at their throats today.

Senator Russell noted, after the vote, that farm prices had broken again and said, "It looks like the farmers are going to get a lot of bad news in one day." They did.

Let the farmers—and other people, too—note who is on their side.

Reds Move to Get Tito Back in Fold

It remains to be seen whether Russia's naming of an ambassador to Yugoslavia and the return favor by Tito will result in eventually bringing the Yugoslav nation back into the Iron Curtain orbit, but it is a straw in the wind well worth watching by the West.

The free world alliance has anticipated such a move by Malenkov. His arch rival for power, the late Zhdanov, is credited with the policies that resulted in Tito's defection from Moscow. His policy of all-out bold antagonism toward the West is given credit for many of Moscow's failures in diplomacy since 1947—the year the West became aware of its danger and formed a united front in opposition to Kremlin designs.

Malenkov is reported to have opposed most of Zhdanov's policies. The many conciliatory moves now emanating from Moscow are a reflection of a change in tactics that presents an even greater potential danger.

In a remarkably prophetic biography of Malenkov published a few weeks ago, Martin Ebon said: "As Malenkov, even temporarily, decides on a policy of hypocrisy—of speaking softly in the Teheran-policy manner—such a policy must constitute a grave danger to the West. As a 'Malenkovism' develops that turns a hypocritical smile westward, the foundation of Western strength is being weakened."

Mr. Ebon says further: "Malenkov can benefit most from a policy of keeping the West off balance; of blowing hot one day and cold the next; of simultaneously talking peace and stirring up guerrilla war; of answering the questions of a foreign journalist with great cordiality, while provoking riots in Japan. It is the technique of the magician, who distracts the attention of his audience with the clever gestures of one hand while he prepares his next trick with the other."

By following these tactics, the new Russian leadership hopes once again to lull the West to sleep while continuing its relentless pressures. We must be on guard—there can be no change in basic Western strategy except at dire peril.

Indeed, Dr. Conant Does Believe in God

Dr. James B. Conant, former president of Harvard, is one of the truly great men of our time. His contributions to science as head of an army board of scientists contributed much to our victories in both world wars.

In education he has been a stout defender of the public school system.

He presently is serving as U. S. Commissioner in Germany. His job there has received the high praise of all concerned... all save Joe McCarthy.

McCarthy thinks Dr. Conant is not doing a good job because Dr. Conant defended some men, in the German office, whom McCarthy doesn't like. The senator also objected to Dr. Conant's opinion that while books of Communist writers should not be put in our information offices, that books of non-Communist views should be retained since this country is one where a man has a right to differ.

McCarthy sneeringly referred to one of the great men of our time as "professor." He also said that he believed Dr. Conant to be one of those kindly persons who believes "God is in his heaven and all is right with the world."

Well, that probably is right. Dr. Conant does believe God is in His heaven. And he does believe all would be right with the world if God's word and teachings, as revealed to us, were followed.

He is kind and what is more, he is just. He also is not a boor and he certainly is not a boor drunk with power and ambitious to be a Caesar.

He follows exactly the lines proclaimed for Americans by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in his Sunday address at Dartmouth—an address which McCarthy was seeking to tear down in his oblique questioning.

We Could Name Some Teachers of Politics

Politics will soon have a place in college curricula, according to Minnesota's State Republican Chairman P. K. Peterson. He told a college graduation audience so the other night.

"Politics should be raised to the level of a profession," the Minnesotan said. "It properly deserves special training."

If the Peterson prophecy comes true, and a school of politics is added at the University of Georgia, we won't have to go out of the state to form the faculty. We can think of several natives whose successful experience in the field would qualify them for teaching posts.

Only Full Truth Can Save A-Spies

WASHINGTON—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, condemned to death as spies for having stolen atom bomb secrets and giving them to Russia, can have their lives spared and their sentences commuted—if they tell the names of their accomplices and give information that will be useful in their arrest.

No formal offer has been made but in indirect ways the fact is known to them that a commutation will result if the convicted spies reveal the information. Up to now, they have been defiant.

The theory of commutation is this: While the Rosenbergs will be punished by a long-term prison sentence and be eligible for parole in 20 years, the United States would benefit by being able to detect other spies and particularly to prevent the theft of further information by conspirators—now unknown.

From the interest taken in the case by the Soviet government, it is apparent Moscow is grateful for what the Rosenbergs have done. Through Soviet agents all over the world, public pleas for mercy have been stirred up and agitation induced among well-meaning citizens.

American embassies have been picketed. The White House has been picketed and every legal maneuver has been used and lots of money spent to try to save the Rosenbergs. How has this money been spent and where did it come from? Some congressional committee might investigate.

The Rosenbergs are guilty of one of the worst crimes in American history. Benedict Arnold's treason, for which he paid the death penalty, was insignificant in comparison to the crime of the Rosenbergs. They also betrayed their country in wartime—during the year 1944 and since.

The other day Harold Urey, a prominent scientist, sent a message to the White House claiming that the two accused persons could not have transmitted orally the scientific information they were alleged to possess. But the fact is the information and sketches were on paper, and a spy can act as a courier without being a scientist.

Judge Irving Kaufman of New York, who knows the facts about what the Rosenbergs did steal, expressed himself this way on April 5 last when he pronounced the death sentences:

"Your crime is worse than murder. In committing the act of murder, the criminal kills only his victim. When justice is meted out the chapter is closed. But in your case, I believe your conduct in putting into the hands of the Russians the A-bomb years before our best scientists predicted Russia would perfect the bomb has already caused the Communist aggression in Korea with the resultant casualties exceeding 50,000 Americans and who knows but that millions more of innocent people may pay the price of your treason."

Comet Jetliners Are New Thrill

ROME—The Comet jetliner is a smallish plane, as Constellations, DC-6s and Boeings go. Walking up its aisle to our seat in the front compartment it seemed not unlike a slightly oversized DC-3. But there the resemblance ends.

There, in fact, begins an utterly new experience for an air-plane buff. It is a thrilling experience.

Not that we weren't warned that it would be something special. One can't live in London a day without realizing that the British look upon the Comet as Americans of a century ago must have looked upon our clipper ships.

"The greatest thing since sliced bread," enthused an American traveler who had been whisked from London to Rome in a little under two hours. Comet pilots like Capt. J. B. Burnett feel that this may be the best tribute yet coined to the unique craft.

It is a different kind of air travel from the moment the first of four 5,000 pounds thrust jet engines goes to work. Instead of the violent asthma and racking cough of a conventional plane engine, this gives off the purr of a dynamo. It does not shake the swept-back wing in which it is enclosed, or the cabin.

And when all four are turning, and you start taxiing to the starting mark, there is less noise inside the heavily insulated cabin than a single reciprocating engine makes—though now you are dealing with approximately 20,000 horsepower.

At the end of the runway Captain Burnett, a friendly little man who flew with the RAF coastal command during the war, poured more and more fuel (kerosene) into his engines while his brakes held the plane still—until he developed the maximum: 10,250 rpm's. Then he let go and we shot forward much more quickly, at the start, at least, than does a regular plane.

The run was a bit longer than a conventional airliner, and the first part of the climb a bit more leisurely. But as we rose higher the efficiency of the plane increased. At 37,000 feet Captain Burnett leveled off, cut the engines to 9,500 rpm's, and we began our cruise. Our speed came up toward the 500 mph mark, which is as fast as they run these things, though strong tail winds have caused Comets on regular runs to have ground speeds of about 700 mph.

A slight frost formed on the inside of the tremendously strong windows. It was 63 degrees below zero outside. Inside, except for a slightly cool floor, all was snug. There wasn't the faintest vibration or the remotest conception of speed.

He apologized later for being a few minutes late for the 1,000-mile flight. He had to fly around some jet maneuvers being put on by the French Air Force. "Wouldn't want to get mixed up with that sort of thing," he said.

High Tariff Policy Forces Allies Of U. S. To Trade With the Enemy

Charleston, S. C.—A couple of times lately you have published letters signed by one De Rhette Greene of Savannah.

He sounds the traditional GOP isolationist bell of "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." He would throw the world to the Communists by giving manufacturing nations no alternative. He would isolate the United States behind its high tariff walls and when the Reds finally came knocking at the door he would blame it on the Democrats.

He would have us sit amid the ruins of our living standards with our surplus of goods and our useless pile of gold at Fort Knox, Ky., and cry "Un-American" and "socialism" when we had to ladle out a few pennies to feed soup to the unemployed. He would call "left-wing" or communist any "deals" the people demanded so they might be fed.

He forgets, too, that the South fought a bloody war largely over the free trade issue and was reduced to poverty for 100 years for losing the argument.

If our allies today must make the choice of being perpetual beggars for our bounty or trade and alliance with the Reds, we leave them only one honorable course. What would Mr. Greene do?

Repealing Excess Profits Tax Wouldn't Help the Individual

Miami Springs—I wish to register a complaint about the GOP administration's proposed handling of the excess profits tax on corporations.

In his campaign platform Ike promised a reduction in income taxes; but the proposed repeal of the excess profits tax only increases the present all-time high profit of corporations. It is probable that these corporations would declare higher dividends to their stockholders who are also taxpayers. Now this system will benefit some individuals as taxpayers but the ratio to total taxpayers is small. The majority of large corporation stock is owned or controlled by a relatively small number of stockholders.

A more equitable solution would be to reduce overall individual tax rate or, better still, increase the basic exemption allowed on individual income tax returns from $600

The First Big Storm of the Summer Left All the Mountain Cold and Dark

TATE MOUNTAIN—The day was hot and still and dry and though the sun filled the sky with a veil of cloud, the old-timers said it didn't mean anything. There had been many of these overcast days, but no rain since April. The mountains were green with that lush green of the first leaf, but the dirt road around the lake was a river of dust, and the powdery dust lay thick on the trees beside the road.

Evening came, and with it an unnatural stillness. The little breeze that usually comes with the setting of the sun did not blow. There was a sense of waiting in the air, a close, smothering feeling of something about to burst or break or shatter. The birds sang fitfully. The bob-white called a nervous note or two, then stopped. Then all at once, there was a great silence, as if nothing lived upon the earth. It was growing dark fast. Too dark, too fast, for the time of day.

The first great crash of thunder and glare of lightning was like the sudden blasting of a mighty cannon. It tore the sky apart and through the riven heavens the deluge fell. Sharp crack close by, and far-off rumble. Lightning in sheets and lightning in dancing spears stabbed from the black sky toward the drowning earth. Boom and thunder, crackle, crash, and bang, for half an hour the cannonade continued. Under the bed the dog whimpered. On the beds the children, big-eyed and frightened, watched through the windows to $700 or even $800. With this type of tax saving, not a few, but every single taxpayer would benefit and their benefits would increase with the size of the family and not with the size of the bank roll.

Lowly Eels Show A Complex Design

In two previous columns I have said that without a life purpose one becomes "fed up" and bored. But far more important than any goals we may set for ourselves is to understand God's goals and to allow our lives to be caught up in His great purpose. No one is ever bored who obeys Him who said, "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." (Matt. 10:39).

Take, for example, William E. Gladstone. He was four times Prime Minister of Great Britain and for 61 years served as a member of the House of Commons. One day his wife said to him, "I can't understand how you are able to bear up under the burdens of your office and of these savage and cruel attacks that are sometimes made on you by political opponents."

He replied quietly, "It is only because I try to live sub specie aeternitatis,"—under the aspect of eternity.

When one begins to realize that beyond this daily grind of ours there is an eternal plan and purpose, then life takes on new meaning. There is a little book entitled "Man Does Not Stand Alone" by Cressy Morrison, former president of the New York Academy of Science. In it he shows that by unwavering and mathematical law we can prove that our universe was designed and executed by divine intelligence.

Dr. Morrison discusses, for instance, the eel and points out that even that lowly creature is a marvelous demonstration of intricate planning and purpose. Did you know that eels from all over the world at maturity go down to the Gulf stream off Bermuda to breed? Well, they do.

From all the rivers and oceans of the world they come to that one place. From the Volga in Russia and the Mississippi, from the Amazon in South America and the Chattahoochee, from Lake Michigan and from the Japanese sea they all come.

Then after having given birth to their young, they die. But the newborn eels go straight as an arrow back to the exact river, lake, pond or ocean from where their mothers came. No eel has ever made a mistake as far as fishermen around the world have discovered.

Dr. Morrison says you cannot explain it without a divine Intelligence, which we call God. And if God would plan so carefully and guide so clearly the lowly eel, how much more has He done and will do for His highest creatures—you and me!

Garage Manager Turns to Horses

Jack Stevens is a lithe, good-looking, slightly graying fellow whose business is automobiles and trucks. Jack is manager of the Atlanta Newspapers garage on Alexander Street in Atlanta. The Stevens stable houses the transportation by which newsmen and lensmen cover Dixie, by which newspapers are delivered in Georgia and five surrounding states. Last month trucks from the ANI garage ran up a total of 150,495 miles. Jack Stevens' job is to keep 'em rolling. He and his staff grease 'em and gas 'em and put 'em on the road.

A man who practically lives in a garage needs a hobby far afield from exhaust fumes. Jack has one that fits the bill. He turns to horses. For the next four days, the ANI transportation manager will be a scarce article around Alexander Street. He'll be out at Chastain Memorial Park running the 10th annual Shrine Horse Show put on by the Yearab Temple Mounted Patrol.

Incidentally, the "capable and genial Mr. Stevens," as Secretary Evelyn Stille describes her boss, is ringmaster for the Shrine show for the third year in succession, first time that has happened in the 10 years of the event.

Always a great exhibition, the 1953 show promises to be the best ever, according to Atlanta's Dudley Fort. Dudley swears he has nothing to do with publicity, but he's not been averse this week to plugging the annual event. When I saw him last, he was still walking on air because his jumper Reno Ozone had won the grand championship at Charlotte last week. Georgia is counting on Ozone and Lee Kennedy's Circus Clown to more than hold their own against a stable of high class hedgehoppers coming down from North Carolina.

Besides jumpers, there'll be 230 other horses of the best the South has to offer—three-gaited, five-gaited, harness, etc. They'll show twice daily today through Saturday.

After so long a time automobiles become antiques fit mostly for parades. But in horses, Dudley Fort and Jack Stevens will tell you, the model never changes. Nor does it need to.

This week at Chastain Park it will be horse against horse and rider against rider, not for the prize money although there will be some, but for the glory of the thing. And for the best of causes, the many fine charities of Atlanta Shrine.

SPEAKING OF ANTIQUES, how old must a license plate become before it enters the age class? Some drivers still displaying 1952 tags evidently aim to find out. I saw a Florida driver this week with a 1952 plate, but he was headed south so he may have been out of his home state since the first of the year. Georgia natives don't have that excuse.

Frank Rossiter of The Savannah Morning News tells of a salesman who delayed putting his 1952 tag on just to see if he would be stopped. No one bothered him all year. When the end of '52 came, he took the unused '52 plate out of the trunk and threw it away, substituting the 1953 permit for the 1951, I presume.

Solons Vote Small Firm Loan Setup

Extend Controls;
Maybank Balks

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—Senate-House conferees today agreed upon a two-year extension of some defense mobilization controls and on creation of a permanent Small Business Administration with broad lending powers.

Knocked out of the bill was a watered-down section which would have let the President impose a 90-day freeze on prices, wages and rents in a war crisis, but only after specific congressional sanction.

WILL REFUSE TO SIGN

Senator Maybank (Dem., S.C.) announced he would refuse to sign the conference report because the Senate conferees accepted the new Small Business Administration which had been written in by the House.

This agency is supposed to take over the small business lending functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which is scheduled to go out of business June 30, 1954.

But Maybank insisted the Senate never had held hearings on the SBA and that there was no assurance it could get the $250,000,000 in lending authority provided in the bill.

He said he was not going to vote for a new agency to handle the lending job of the RFC when there was no assurance SBA would be able to function.

The compromise bill will extend to June 30, 1955, powers of the government to allocate and fix priorities for scarce materials needed in the defense effort.

Some allocations powers over materials for civilian use also are continued, although these are not nearly as broad as in the present Defense Production Act.

ONLY CIVILIAN CURBS

The administration has announced that the only civilian controls it plans will cover five scarce metals including tungsten, cobalt and nickel.

Also extended for two years is the V-loan program under which the government guarantees private loans to defense contractors.

The government's powers to control prices and wages died April 30. These are not revived by the new bill.

Also permitted to die this June 30 is a section of the Defense Production Act under which import restrictions are required on dairy products, fats and oils when they are considered harmful to U. S. producers.

Representative Wolcott (Rep., Mich.), head of the House conferees, said the compromise controls bill would be called up in that body tomorrow.

Senate Votes Wheat Gift To Drought-Hit Pakistan

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—The Senate swiftly passed today a bill giving drought-plagued Pakistan one million tons of wheat from America's big surplus.

It was only six days ago that President Eisenhower sent a special message to Congress proposing the gift. The bill now goes to the House, where administration leaders will try to get it through in time to have the first shipments of wheat reach Pakistan in August.

Later today the House Agriculture Committee gave the bill its approval.

The grain will come out of surplus stocks acquired by the government under price support programs. A million tons amounts to about 37 million bushels. Including transportation charges, the gift will cost the government about 100 million dollars.

Government warehouses are bulging with 310 million bushels of wheat. In addition to helping avert a famine in Pakistan, a friendly, anti-Communist country, the grant will make some room for about 100 million bushels of wheat the government is expected to acquire from the 1952 crop. Thus the bill is, in a sense, an American farm relief measure as well as relief for Pakistan.

Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.), chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said he knew of no other nations needing help with food this year. But he disclosed that Eisenhower plans to send to Congress soon a bill which would give the President blanket authority to use American food surpluses to promote good will for this country abroad.

The Senate debated only an hour before passing the Pakistan bill by voice vote.

Water Spout Shoots 1,500 Ft. at N. O.

NEW ORLEANS, June 16 (AP)—A waterspout formed over the Mississippi River here today but dissipated in three minutes. No damage or injuries were reported.

Weather bureau officials said the spout shot water 1,500 feet into the air.

A second disturbance, reported by city police as being a "little twister" — occurred in the Elysian Fields section of New Orleans about the same time. Police said it turned one automobile around and sent trash whirling into the air.

Violent Air Bends B-47 Wings 11 Ft.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., June 16 (AP)—A memorable flight through clear but violent upper air which bent the wings of a B-47 jet bomber as much as 11 feet was reported today by a test-group pilot from Kirtland Air Force Base at Albuquerque, N. M.

This strange and hitherto unreported turbulence at high levels is something that could damage the big jet bombers, Capt. Dave Critchlow, pilot instructor at Kirtland, told the American Meteorological Society.

The meteorologists are meeting here concurrently with the Pacific division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

A dozen or more such incidents have been recorded by the Air Force, Critchlow said. As a result, weather analyses now are being made which can forewarn fliers to some extent, Lt. Col. William H. Wyatt, Kirtland meteorologist, reported.

Although the B-47 and similar planes are built to take beatings in extreme turbulence, their speed drops materially under such conditions and there is an appreciable waste of fuel, Critchlow said.

The forecasts now are being made to guide pilots above or below these areas of turbulence.

Actually, the wings of a B-47 drop slightly when the plane is on the ground but they angle upward several degrees in flight. The wing tips while aloft are 13 feet higher than when aground, Critchlow reported.

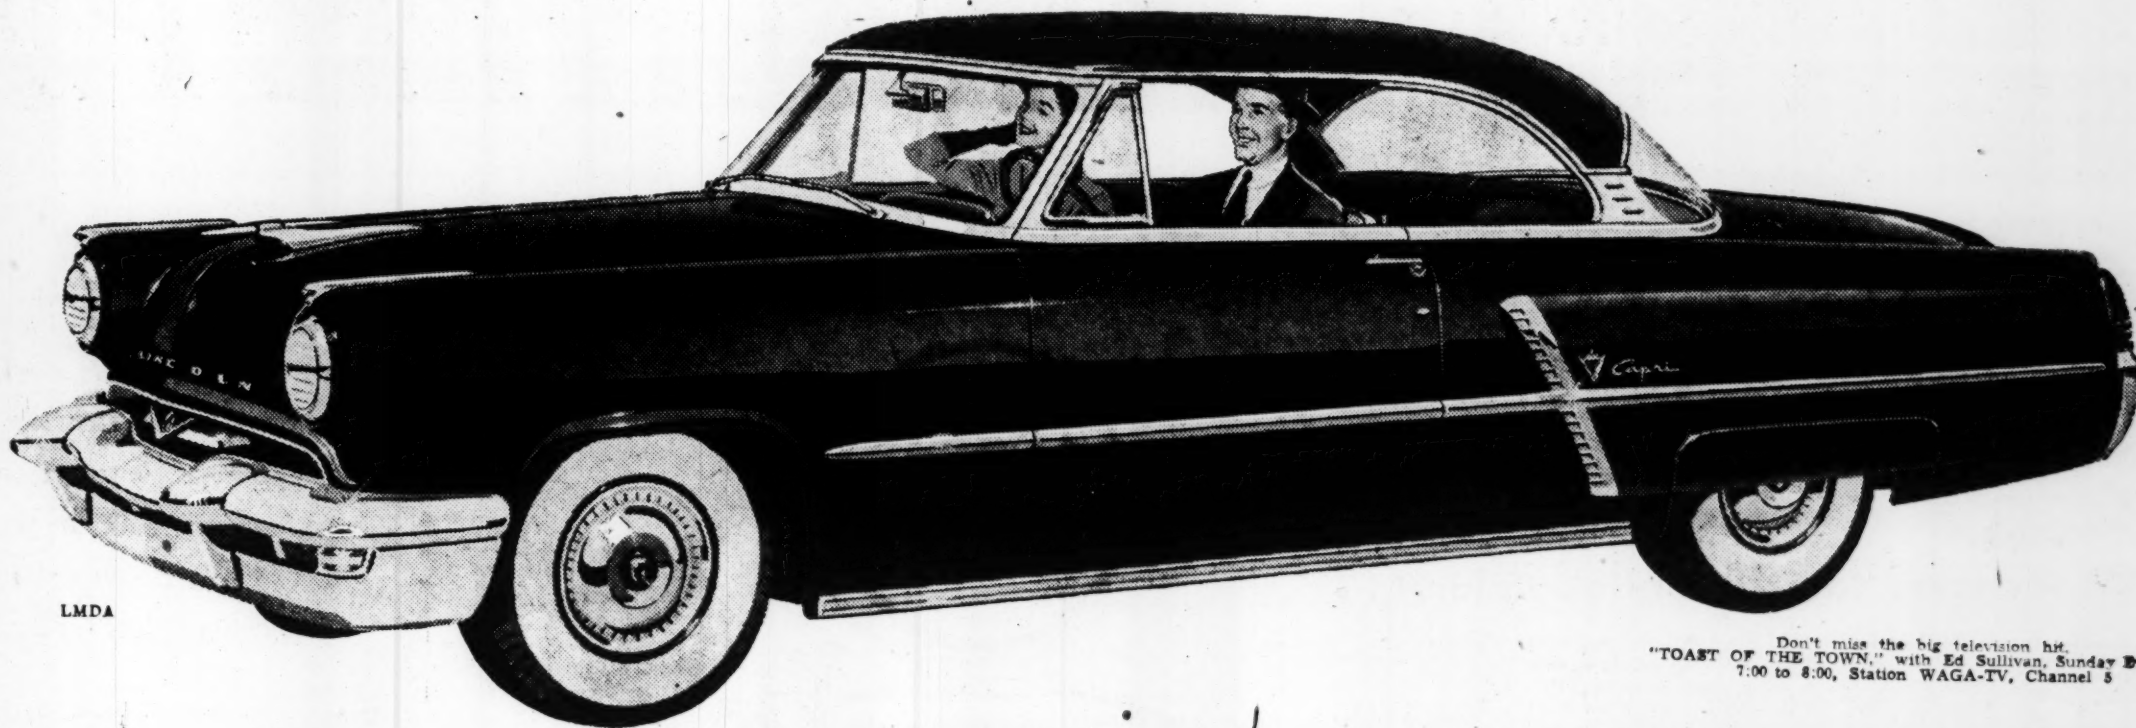

Just how much flexing the wings can take has not been disclosed, the flier added. However, the suddenness of the jolts in the turbulent air mass, taking up as much as 11 of these 13 feet, may be too much for safety, Critchlow said.

Rare Religious Textbook Given to Emory Library

Benjamin N. Covington of Atlanta has presented a rare edition of "Science and Health," with Key to the Scriptures textbook of Christian Science, to the Emory University library.

He made the presentation on behalf of the pupils of Carolyn Cobb, C. S. B.

Only 1,000 copies of this book, which originally sold for $100 each, were printed as a special subscription edition in 1941. These already have become collectors' items.

The volume is printed on a hand-made linen paper, produced in England. Each page is marked with the Cross and Crown emblem which Mary Baker Eddy, author of "Science and Health" and founder of Christian Science, approved for all Christian Science publications.

The book is set in a specially revised and cut Laurentian type, designed for this book only by William Dana Orcutt. It is bound in Indian Morocco and enclosed in a cloth-covered, fleece-lined wooden box.

The flyleaf inscription reads: "This special edition of 'Science and Health,' with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, given to Emory University for use in the university library, by the Christian Science Association of the Pupils of Carolyn Cobb, C. S. B., Atlanta, Georgia."

"She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates." (Proverbs 31: 26, 31.)

Flying Saucers Just Car Lights, Atlantan Says

A retired Atlanta sawmill operator says he "knows flying saucers are the reflections of automobile lights in the sky" and is confident he can prove it.

M. J. Bowen of 1129 Hardee St., N. E., says he first discovered this three years ago but didn't think anything about it. But lately, "with all these people seeing things in the sky," he said, "I thought the public ought to have an explanation of what they are."

He offered to take any air expert or scientist to the location where he saw the lights on several occasions—a point near the Oak Grove Church 10 miles beyond the Panthersville School—to prove his belief.

Wilson Sees No Stepup By Allies

Repeats AF Funds Are Adequate

and declared the Air Force's combat strength would not suffer.

ADEQUATE FUNDS

Wilson, who said he had not seen the Air Force's revised request before it was sent to the Senate subcommittee, restated his view that there were adequate funds in the budget. He said there had been no cutbacks in production of combat aircraft but said the Air Force is not to be permitted to order as many planes for future delivery because the United States doesn't have to make up its mind right now. The Air Force has contended it needs larger funds to plan its build-up and order ahead.

Wilson resisted various attempts by reporters to get a detailed estimate of what a Korean truce would mean in terms of troops committed to the area and the defense budget.

He did say, however, that even if actual combat stops in Korea it would take six months or longer to wind up prisoner exchange and other details.

BASIC PROBLEMS

"While the shooting will have stopped," he said, "basic problems will have to be adjusted." He said he anticipated there would be a "bring-the-boys-home" drive following an armistice but said he wanted to repeat, "that can't be done safely."

As to how much the present budget before Congress would be affected by a Korean armistice,

NEW YORK, June 16—Dr. Luther Evans, librarian of Congress, today was recommended as director general of the UN educational, scientific and cultural organization by its executive council. He must be confirmed by UNESCO's general conference in Paris in July.

Wilson was cautious. He said some funds could be cut but added they won't be as much as some persons will expect.

Wilson was asked if he thought there had been "traitors" in the Pentagon who had caused the ammunition shortage. He was told that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy had said as much. Wilson said the reporter should ask McCarthy but added "as far as I'm concerned there are no traitors in this building. If I thought there were they would be kicked out pretty quickly."

E. Berlin Stages March To Show Off 'Freedom'

nist housing project, from losing their tempers.

The procession wound three miles through East Berlin to the former Nazi Aviation Ministry, now administrative headquarters of the Soviet Zone. People's (Communist) policemen along the way rerouted traffic so the demonstrators could proceed unhampered.

The five thousand massed against the locked doors of the government building. They demanded to see Grotewohl and Communist Secretary General Walter Ulbricht.

Speakers belonging to the Communist Trade Union Federation and the Communist Free German Youth shouted, "We demand lower prices and reduction of the work quotas."

Communist Agitprops (agitation propagandists) circulated through the crowd, explaining in loud voice that "Unity of workers is the important thing" and exhorting, "Look at what Socialist unity has already created for us."

SEES LEADERS

Word was sent to the crowd that its demand to see Grotewohl and Ulbricht could not be granted, but a small delegation would be received.

For nearly two hours, the demonstrators hung about the building. Then leaders ordered a march back to work. This was acclaimed by clenched fist salutes and hands clapped overhead in the Communist Youth "friendship greeting."

There was nothing phony about the discontent with Communist speed-ups and sagging living standards which East Berlin workers expressed today.

But the parade itself, blowing off proletarian steam, was as unreal as a mob scene in a movie studio.

UN evacuees in two and a half years." A tabulation of evacuation flights indicated that about 2,500 wounded Allied soldiers, mostly South Koreans, were flown from the front to hospitals in Southern Korea and Japan.

Belief grew that the Chinese offensive may be delaying the drawing of a ceasefire line, and thus delaying an armistice.

General Clark went ahead with plans for the truce, however, by announcing that Maj. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan will serve as the senior UN member of the joint military commission which will enforce the terms of an armistice.

The truce negotiators met on schedule at Panmunjom today at 11 a. m. (9 p. m. Atlanta Time Tuesday) and recessed 20 minutes later without giving any indication of what was discussed.

Douglas' Decision on Rosenbergs Due Today

day, the day after the adjournment of the court for the summer recess. Instead they buzzed with uneasy activity incident to the Rosenberg case.

Reporters and cameramen kept a wearisome vigil throughout the day and court officials were on duty overtime. Blocs of tourists steered through the buildings by guides brightened up when they were told that behind the tall brass gates that close off the area where the justices' chambers are, Douglas was wrestling alone with the problem of whether to give the spies a temporary reprieve until the Supreme Court could again consider new appeals from adverse decisions of the lower courts.

Justice Douglas agreed to hear the plea for a stay after the high court had rejected at its regular session yesterday a similar plea by the Rosenbergs' attorneys and, at a rare special session called late in the day by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, had refused to hear arguments by counsel for the spies. Any justice of the high court has power to grant a stay on his own responsibility at any time. The court as a whole would decide later, however, whether it would hear the new appeals.

Justice Douglas received the formal petition for a stay at 10 a. m. from John H. Finerty,

Prof. Malcom Sharp of the University of Chicago law school, and Miss Gloria Agrin, associated with Bloch as counsel for the Rosenbergs.

Shortly thereafter he also received an application for a writ of habeas corpus from Fyke Farmer, a Nashville, Tenn., attorney, and Daniel G. Marshall, a Los Angeles lawyer, representing Irwin Edelman, a private citizen of Los Angeles. Judge Irving R. Kaufman, in the New York Federal Court yesterday, rejected a similar plea by Farmer on the grounds that he was an intruder and an interloper in the case and had no authorization to represent the Rosenbergs.

Justice Douglas, however, heard Farmer and Marshall briefly and permitted them to file an impromptu handwritten brief, to the Supreme Court.

The chief arguments of these attorneys were that David Greenglass and his wife, who were charged with the Rosenbergs, had been denied an open trial; that the 1917 espionage statute under which the Rosenbergs were tried and convicted had been superceded by the Atomic Energy Act; and that secret testimony taken at the trial had never been shown to the Supreme Court.

Local Forces May Get 'Red' Teachers' Probes

By C. P. TRUSSELL

WASHINGTON, June 16—The Senate internal security subcommittee indicated Tuesday that it planned to leave to state, local or institutional authorities the searching for communism among teachers in schools and colleges in areas where determined action against Reds in classrooms had been demonstrated.

The panel, which has been investigating communist infiltration into the educational system for months, scheduled for appearance Wednesday Joseph B. Cavallaro, chairman of the New York City board of higher education. It was viewed widely as a decisive step toward the turning of this investigative matter back to state and local levels. Cavallaro has been asked by the subcommittee to outline at a public hearing just what steps his board was taking to keep the four New York City colleges free from Communist influences in the classrooms and on the campuses.

14 TEACHERS
The subcommittee has found 14 teachers in colleges of New York system who have refused under constitutional protection against self-incrimination to reply to questions as to whether they ever had been members of the Communist Party.

If Cavallaro's answers were "satisfactory," it was said by Robert Morris, chief subcommittee counsel, New York City might be scratched from the panel's investigative list.

The subcommittee, it developed, is calling no more witnesses from the California area in the light of a report made March 20 by Richard E. Combs, chief counsel of that state's senate committee on un-American activities. Combs testified that through co-operative action at state, local and college levels more than 100 faculty members had been removed since last June and a similar number barred from teaching positions.

OSS, OWI MEMBERS

This trend developed as the subcommittee, headed by Sen. William E. Jenner, pursued another of its investigations, the seeking of "a pattern" of alleged communist infiltration into key government posts during World War II.

In public hearing, three former members of the office of Strategic Services and one of the Office of War Information gave the Fifth Amendment as grounds for refusing to answer questions. The Fifth Amendment provides that no one "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

This has been interpreted in the courts to mean that a witness is not required to give testimony that might tend to incriminate him.

The former members of the OSS, one of the most hush-hush of wartime agencies, were Miss Helen Barrett Tenney, Milton Wolfe and Irving Fajans, all of New York City. The former OWI, employee was Saul Carson of New York, who swore he was not a communist now, or when he was in the OWI.

British Casualties 2,237 in 23 Mos.

LONDON, June 16—British casualties in Korea during the 23 months ending June 1, 1953, totaled 2,237 officers and men, of whom 447 were killed or died of wounds, Parliamentary Secretary of Defense Nigel Birch told the House of Commons today.

Total U. N. casualties for the same period were about 180,000 of whom about 35,000 were killed, Birch said. Total U. N. casualties since the war began three years ago have passed the 400,000 mark.

Told Burglar-Pals Were Rich Hotel Men, Says Little Audrey, and Jury Deadlocks

GREENVILLE, Miss., June 16—"Little Audrey," the sweater girl escape artist, testified at her trial today that she took up with a pair of burglars because she thought they were rich hotel men from Florida.

The shapely 19-year-old Indian girl was tried as an accessory to a break-in here last year. Her case went to the jury at 10 p. m. with the state demanding that she be sent to the Mississippi Cotton Farm Prison as "a lesson for a bad girl."

The jury reported at 6:30 p. m. that it was "hopelessly deadlocked" and Circuit Judge Arthur Jordan ordered the jurymen locked up for the night. The panel came back at 5:35 to report it saw no chance of reaching a verdict "tonight or ever," but Judge Jordan told the jurors to "think it over" tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Ruth Audrey Woods-Rybolt, to give her the full name she acquired during a brief period of freedom, appeared in court as defendant before the most bugged crowd ever to watch a simple burglary case.

But before the testimony was completed she had puffed her way through two packs of cigarettes, chewed her nails and gone through a sobbing spell as her attorney pleaded with the jury to give her a new chance.

Twice she was excused to leave the court room and was escorted to the door by Deputy Sheriff Robert Suddeth while the crowd snickered. It was from Suddeth's custody that Little Audrey escaped on the pretext of going to the rest room while being transported back to Indiana several months ago.

The girl was accused of keeping a getaway car purring outside while her two companions burglarized an auto firm. When she took the stand she solemnly repudiated a confession attributed to her and said she was not aware the two men were on a crime spree.

"They came through this place in Kentucky where I was working," she said, "and they said they were hotel men from Florida. They had plenty of money, they were just traveling around, and I went along."

She said she was wearing a dress reported stolen in Texas when arrested because one of her companions, Clarence Raulerson, had taken her clothes away from her and she put on a dress she pending.

Judge Orders TV-Hater To Spare Wives Third Set in Maintenance Dispute

CHICAGO, June 16—A man who hates television was enjoined today from "doing injury" to his wife's third TV set.

Judge Charles I. Fleming of Circuit Court issued an injunction against Arthur Anderson, 56, at the request of Anderson's wife, Ruby, 58, who is suing for separate maintenance. Mrs. Anderson testified her irate spouse already has ruined two sets she bought with her own money and has threatened to wreck a third.

Mrs. Anderson's attorney, Charles C. Cooley, said Anderson started to smash the third set when it arrived at the Anderson home a month ago. Mrs. Anderson told her husband she would leave if he'd spare the third set and he agreed, Cooley said.

In issuing the injunction against Anderson, Judge Fleming said he personally likes TV, but he understands some people have an "allergy" against certain types of programs.

"But I don't think anyone should take it out on the set," the judge concluded.

BANGOR, Me., June 16—The Mt. Katahdin wilderness honeymoon of Sara Delano Roosevelt, granddaughter of the late President, and Pianist Anthony Di Bonaventura was stricken with acute appendicitis at a resort camp.

Di Bonaventura's condition was reported good tonight at Eastern Maine General Hospital after an appendectomy.

The operation, performed by Dr. Albert C. Todd of Brewer, took place early today after the 23-year-old musician has brought by ambulance out of the woods over 30 miles of rough roads to Millinocket and thence to Bangor.

Trio Named By Ike to Envoy Posts

WASHINGTON, June 16—President Eisenhower today chose three business men to serve as ambassadors to Norway, Portugal and Brazil.

L. Corrin Strong, 60, of Washington, was nominated for the Norway post, to succeed C. Ulric Bay whose resignation was accepted by Eisenhower. Strong is president of the Hattie M. Strong Foundation, a philanthropic organization, and a member of the board of the National Savings Bank and Trust Company in Washington. From 1947 to 1950 he was an official of the Economic Co-operation Administration, which handled foreign aid.

M. Robert Guggenheim, 68, also of Washington, was named ambassador to Portugal to succeed Cavendish W. Cannon, a career diplomat. Guggenheim, now retired from business, is a former executive of the American Smelting and Refining Company and former secretary and vice president of the U. S. Zinc Company.

James S. Kemper, 66, a Chicago insurance company executive, was picked to succeed Herschel V. Johnson as ambassador to Brazil. Johnson, a career diplomat, retired some time ago.

British Firm Gets Pact To Equip Dam

WASHINGTON, June 16—The Army announced today it has accepted the bid of a British firm to furnish 10 transformers for the Chief Joseph Dam in Washington state.

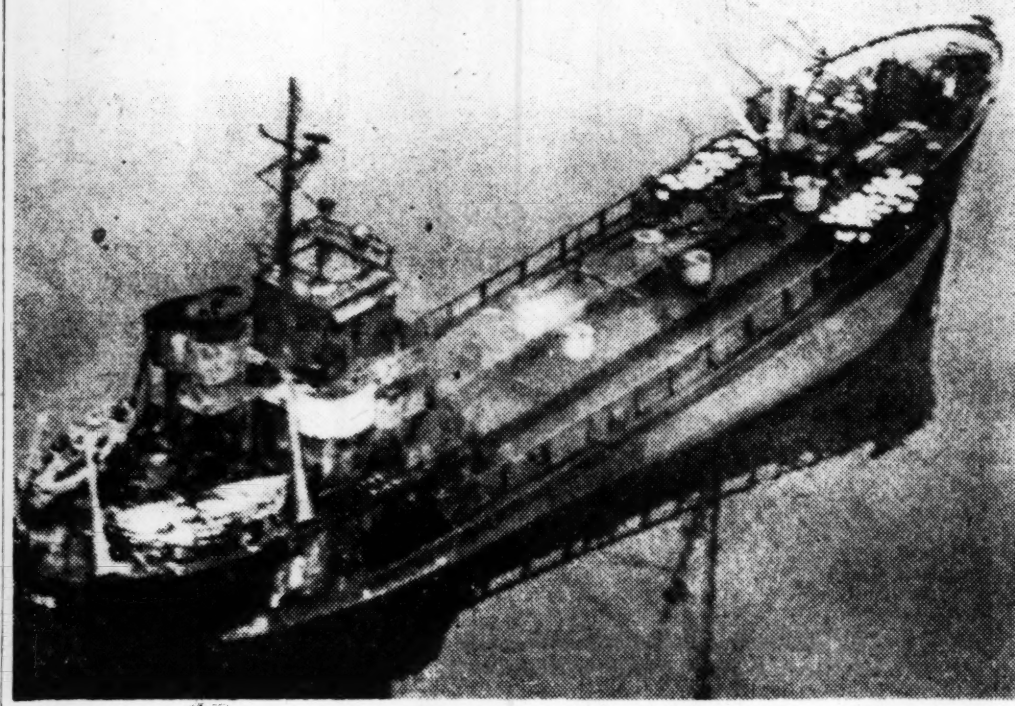

The English Electric Export and Trading Company agreed to do the work for $1,761,317.

This firm was low bidder for all the power equipment at the dam the first time bids were taken. It failed to get the contract, however, when all proposals were rejected.

The rejection set off international protests, with British officials complaining it was a "buy American" move and hardly calculated to encourage foreign firms to go after business in the United States.

But the Defense Department replied that new bids were being called for to straighten out a misunderstanding about specifications on such things as the copper content of the machinery.

The British firm's first bid was $1,831,800 for 10 transformers and $4,406,493 for four generators. Westinghouse Electric Corporation won the contract for the generators the second time with a low bid of $4,249,601.

OIL TANKER ARGUS STILL BURNS IN VANCOUVER BAY
High Octane Aboard Menaces Waterfront as Diesel Oil Blazes

Fiery Ship Is Towed to Free Water

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 16—A burning, gasoline-laden tanker was beached this afternoon after menacing Vancouver's waterways like a sizzling keg of dynamite for 16 hours.

It still held the smoldering threat of a potential bomb blast, but marine officials expressed confidence the high octane gasoline cargo wouldn't explode now.

The stricken ship was the 517-ton Argus. Quick, heroic action by captain and crew, when the ship caught fire at the Imperial Oil Company refinery dock last night, were credited with averting what might have been a waterfront disaster.

An engine room explosion set off the fire in the diesel fuel oil in the after section of the ship. Four crew members were injured.

Crew members raced to shut valves to prevent gasoline fumes from getting to the flames. They also set fire-fighting carbon dioxide jets.

Then Capt. Bill Boyce, with calm courage, remained aboard alone while a tug towed the flaming tanker to a spot in Burrard Inlet, 12 miles from downtown Vancouver.

At one stage, several families evacuated homes along the shore. They returned later as the expected explosion failed to come.

Throughout the night, small explosions shot tongues of fire into the darkness over the Inlet while thousands watched the awesome fireworks from the shore. At least 30 explosions were counted on the ship. Most of them apparently were from oil drums on the deck.

The diesel cargo burned in the stern section. The cargo of 18,000 gallons of gasoline was forward.

Marine officials expressed hope, after the beaching offshore, that the vessel would roll over in deep water and put out the remaining fire.

The Speech Was In Latin, But Not the Laughs

PRINCETON, N. J., June 16—Spectators at Princeton University's 206th commencement exercises today were amazed at the erudition displayed by the graduating class.

During the salutatory address, spoken entirely in Latin, the seniors laughed and clapped ever so often as though catching all the nuances of the classical language were second nature to them.

The truth of the matter is they all had copies of the speech, with stage directions carefully inserted to tell them when to laugh and when to applaud.

Miss Truman Gets Raise in New TV Pact

NEW YORK, June 16—Margaret Truman has been given a new network contract and a raise since her father left the White House, it was announced today.

The National Broadcasting Company said the soprano who set out in 1947 to establish herself as a singer on her own merit and not as the daughter of President Truman, had signed a new one-year contract recently.

The contract is the second renewal of one Miss Truman first signed with the network in 1950. NBC would not say what she would be paid for her appearances but said the contracts represented a "slight increase." Her original contract provided for $4,000 for each TV appearance and $2,500 for each radio appearance.

Loaded Trailers by Rail Idea Hailed by Kennedy

Union Leader Declares Plan
Answer to Dixie's Problems

The railroad industry's expanded plans for transporting loaded highway truck trailers on flat cars would alleviate considerably transportation problems in the South.

RAIL LABOR LEADER
W. P. Kennedy of Cleveland

So says W. P. Kennedy, of Cleveland, Ohio, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Kennedy, scheduled to address the annual Dixie Boosters meeting of the BRT and Ladies' Auxiliary Wednesday at Henry Grady Hotel, says the railroads have a unique opportunity to bring millions of dollars worth of new business to the rails and at the same time make a significant contribution to public safety.

The labor leader reported that latest plans for transporting truck trailers by rail involve use of a specially-designed flat car 75-feet in length which would accommodate two 35-foot truck trailers.

The plans call for simple and rapid loading and unloading of the rail car, thus releasing the trailers for quick and efficient distribution to destination points he said.

He said the plans should prove prosperous to the railroads and should be an answer to some extent to "the growing menace of the 'highway boxcars' which not only jeopardize the lives of motorists but demolish the highways, using them for a private profit without paying their fair share for upkeep."

He indicated that transportation of loaded truck trailers by rail would be of particular significance to this region because the South does not have a railway system as extensive as the systems in other regions of the country.

Delegates representing 11 southern states are attending the three-day meeting, which opened Tuesday. Chairman of the Dixie Boosters is Mrs. Kate Smith of Atlanta.

D. A. MacKenzie of Cleveland, general secretary-treasurer of BRT, will address the 500 delegates at Thursday night's banquet, which climaxes the convention.

During the Atlanta convention, the railroad men are expected to discuss the coming wage movement of the brotherhood. A spokesman said the BRT, the largest operating railroad union in the country, would seek "substantial" wage increases for its members this fall when the present agreement with the railroads expires.

Industrial Employment Totals 2,000 at Bremen

By JOE RICKENBAKER
Constitution Staff Writer

BREMEN, June 16—One Sunday a year has been set aside by the churches of Bremen for an "Industry Appreciation Service" in honor of the industries which have done so much to boost the economy of the city.

The service, at which all the products produced in Bremen are displayed, is one example of why Bremen is known to be tops in civic and industrial relations. The majority of the approximately 2,000 industrially employed persons in the city own their own homes and automobiles and take an active part in all civic and church affairs.

LOCAL OWNERSHIP

With the exception of a large shirt factory, all of the clothing mills in "The Clothing Center of the South" are locally owned and operated.

The largest industry in Bremen in number of employees is a men's suits and sports coat manufacturer. The plant employs nearly 1,000 persons.

The plant produces more than 10,000 suits weekly and was the first major industry to locate in Bremen. It began operating here in 1926.

The second largest industry, a pants factory, produces approximately 26,000 men's slacks weekly and employs nearly 700 persons. This plant, also locally owned, was established in 1923. Another suit plant, which produces more than 5,000 suits weekly, was established in the middle 1940's and employs nearly 200 persons. It is the latest clothing industry to be established in Bremen.

The shirt plant, manufacturers of a well-known brand shirt, came under its present ownership around 1946. Originally the plant manufactured shirts for the present owners on a contract basis. The plant employs approximately 250 persons and produces more than 1,500 dozen shirts weekly.

PIPELINE STATION

On the edge of the city limits are the storage tanks and headquarters of one of the largest stations in the state of a giant pipeline company.

The line has a 14-inch pipe running all the way from Louisiana to Bremen which carries millions of gallons of oil and gasoline from the western fields to distributors throughout the South.

The pipeline is not connected with any oil company but is strictly a transportation company. The total industrial payroll in Bremen has been estimated at approximately $100,000 weekly. Most of the workers in the clothing plants are women whose homes are in a radius of 20 to 25 miles of Bremen. A good many of them come from farms where their fathers and husbands continue to farm and the family income is supplemented by the industrial payroll.

NEW HOSPITAL

An example of the co-operation of industries in aiding the progress of the town is the financing of a new hospital to be built in the near future under the Hill-Burton Act.

The realization of the hospital came when through sizable donations from the industries in the city made up the $130,000 that had to be raised locally to go with the federal and state money.

The three local doctors who operated a private clinic are also showing the type of spirit that is responsible for Bremen's progress by making plans to close the clinic and become members of the staff of the new hospital.

Last year the city completed a sewerage and water project that furnishes these services to the entire town.

A six-inch water main has aided the voluntary fire department immeasurably in offering protection to the citizens.

Bremen has an independent city-owned school system with a contract with the county allowing students in certain rural areas to attend the city schools. Due to the steady increase in population, plans are underway for an addition to the high school building that was constructed a short time ago.

Bremen is located on the Southern and Central of Georgia Railroads at the junction of U. S. Highway 78, running east and west, and Highway 27 running north and south. A number of modern motels are located on these highways at Bremen to accommodate the large number of tourists passing through daily.

Bus service is also available on both highways.

CATTLE TRADE AREA

Although primarily dependent on industries, Bremen also serves as a trade area for a large beef and dairy cattle section. Haralson farms are rapidly being converted from row crop to pasture.

One of Bremen's most active civic organizations, the Lions Club, is conducting a summer recreational program that includes junior league baseball, swimming and other forms of recreation.

Active organizations other than the Lions Club include American Legion and Veteran of Foreign Wars posts and a Businessmen's Club, along with various church organizations.

Finds Long-Lost Spouse Dining With a Blonde

MIAMI, June 16—(INS)—A Poughkeepsie, N. Y., man, who went out of his house three days before Christmas in 1950 for a loaf of bread and never returned, was "found" two and one-half years later by his wife in Miami. Edwin Freiwald, left his home and his pregnant wife Anastasia, who waited and waited, but her husband never returned. Soon after he left, Edwin Jr., was born, but still no word from her husband.

Anastasia came to Florida a few weeks ago to visit friends and on a visit to Miami from Hollywood, Fla., where she was staying, recognized her long-lost spouse—and with an attractive blonde as a dinner companion. Freiwald failed to recognize his wife, but she had little trouble remembering what he looked like and called Miami police.

After being confronted by the police, Freiwald confessed abandoning his wife.

Indicted at 78 In Wife's Death

Young Davis, 78, a Negro, was indicted Tuesday on charge of murdering his 37-year-old wife with a blast from a shotgun. His wife, Goler Bride Davis, was pronounced dead on arrival at Grady Hospital June 13. She had been shot in the left side of her chest.

Police quoted Davis, who lived at 337 Biggers St., S. W., as saying his wife had been running around with too many men.

Culps Quart Whisky For Spite; Near Death

A 27-year-old painter who drank a quart of corn whiskey in two big gulps to "spite his wife" was near death at Grady Hospital, records showed.

Police said the white man, on a binge since Saturday, got angry when his wife chided him for drinking and "showed her just how much he could drink."

After swallowing the whiskey, he chased his wife out of the house with a ball bat, then slumped into a chair where officers found him.

2 Crashes Injure 6 Motorists

Four Negroes were injured Tuesday night—one critically—when their automobile crashed into a tree on Piedmont Avenue, N. E., and a 39-year-old aircraft plant employee and his daughter were injured when he lost control of his car on Lakewood Avenue, S. E., police reported.

Police identified the injured in the Piedmont Avenue crash as Spencer Fryer, 19, of 705 Fraser St., S. E.; the driver; Eula Mae Green, 17, of 374 Buchanan Way, N. E.; Imogene Johnson, 20, of 273 Currier St., N. E.; and Clara Mae Nellons, 27, of 201 Vine St., N. E.

Fryer suffered internal injuries, lacerations and a jaw injury, officers said.

Thomas Harold Eason, 39, of 3088 Jackson St., Hapeville, received a broken shoulder and broken ribs when he lost control of his auto on a curve on Lakewood Avenue, police said. Eason's daughter, Sue, 6, received lacerations.

P. M. J. MacFayden and N. M. Taylor quoted witnesses as saying the driver of the car on Piedmont Road was "clowning at the wheel" and driving at a speed of "more than 50 miles per hour" at the time of the crash.

Also injured in traffic in the Atlanta area were: Mrs. R. C. Steele, 29, of 2559 Godfrey Dr., N. W.; Ronald Delano Roberts, 19, of 4807 Cascade Rd., S. W.; Thomas Eugene Comer, 17, of 1963 West View Dr., S. W.; and William Foster Neel, 30, of 948 Washington St., S. W.

Councilmen for Fair Concession Rate of $2,000

Representatives of City Council's Southeastern Fair Board and a council tax subcommittee voted Tuesday to charge the Southeastern Fair Association a "flat rate" of $2,000 for concession license fees during the fair season.

Councilman Douglas Wood, tax committee chairman, said the action would mean Southeastern Fair Association officials "would prorata license fees among the various shows and concessions and do the actual collecting themselves."

In the past, Wood said, the city has collected individual license fees from concessionaires. Last year, he told members at the joint meeting, around $2,000 was collected by the city.

The group taking the Tuesday action stressed that other regular business license fees at Lakewood Park would not be affected.

Car, 150 Gallons Of 'Hooch' Seized

An automobile containing 150 gallons of non-tax paid whiskey was seized at Highland and Alaska Avenues, N. E., Tuesday, but the driver escaped on foot, police said.

P. L. E. Avery said a man leaped out of the car and fled after apparently spotting the trap set by police who had received an anonymous tip. The "moonshine" was found in gallon cans in the back seat and trunk of the car, Avery said.

Legislators Hear Foes of School Cuts

A legislative committee studying education costs in Georgia was asked Tuesday not to recommend cuts in vocational training, the school lunch program or the number of visiting teachers.

C. L. Harper, executive secretary of the Georgia Teachers and Education Association, and J. S. Wilkerson, president of that group, said the visiting teachers are needed to help keep Negro children in school.

George Martin, director of vocational education, told the committee that home economics, technical and agricultural teachers have done much to raise living standards of the entire state.

LONGER HOURS

Asked by Rep. Walter Harrison of Jenkins why some vocational teachers get higher salaries than academic teachers, Martin said they work longer hours, have to supervise work of students on the farms and in the homes and often teach adult classes.

Miss Eleanor Pryor, director of the school lunch program said school lunches help to build attendance, cause students to enjoy better health and make better grades and cut down on the number of repeater students.

The state provides funds to administer the school lunch program which got $2,345,000 in federal funds for lunches this year, Miss Pryor said. Part of the cost of the lunches is paid by the pupils, and Miss Pryor said the program enabled 273,000 children to have lunches each day during the past school year.

TEACHER STUDY

Committee Secretary W. T. Bodenhamer, Tift County legislator, indicated the committee will study next the certification of teachers. Bodenhamer said the committee is not opposed to employing college-trained teachers but declared there should be some leeway where qualified personnel can be used, regardless of whether they have the desired degrees.

Earlier, Harper said his association is filing a request with the State Board of Education for 10 regional trade schools for Negroes.

LOCATION OF SCHOOLS

Harper said the schools would be located in Atlanta, Rome, Athens, Augusta, Savannah, Brunswick, Waycross, Valdosta, Albany and Columbus, and would offer free training to Negroes in masonry, carpentry and other trades.

"If the request is granted, we would use existing facilities for the most part," Harper said. "Though in some cases we would have to add a room or two in local high schools."

Bids Sought For Unit at Childs Home

The Fulton County welfare board voted Tuesday to ask bids on a new cottage at Oak Hill Homes, the board's institution for neglected children at 2799 Stewart Ave., S. W.

Estimated cost will be $70,000. Welfare Director Wellborn Ellis said $30,000 will be paid from bond money put aside "years ago" for the project.

The new cottage, which will have rooms for 16 children and quarters for the supervisor of the home, will increase Oak Hill's capacity to 64.

The one-story cottage was designed by Toombs & Co., architects. It is expected to be completed by the first of 1954.

Children at the home are committed by the juvenile court.

Rep. Davis Urges Tax Aid For Mothers Who Work

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 16—Rep. James C. Davis of Georgia Tuesday urged the House ways and means committee to approve legislation allowing working mothers to deduct expenses incurred for the care of their children during employment hours from their income taxes.

Judge Davis told the committee there is a "crying need" to correct the injustice now imposed on working mothers.

The Decatur congressman introduced legislation to this end by proposing an amendment to the Internal Revenue Code last April. As the law now stands, working mothers are not allowed to deduct anything for expenses incurred in employing others to care for their children.

"I feel there is a widespread need for legislation of this kind," Rep. Davis said. "There are many mothers of small children

Youth in Custody; Has 44 Sisters And Brothers

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 16—(INS)—John Nashworthy, 19, of Tifton, Ga., was held in "protective custody" at Nashville today because of his desire to become a hillbilly singer—and the fact that he comes from a large family.

John has 44 brothers and sisters whom he left last week to try to fulfill his dream of becoming a hillbilly singer.

When John hit Nashville he had no money for lodging. He said he spent $6 he earned in Atlanta for food and soap. He told Judge John Draper, before whom he was hauled on a loitering charge, that he preferred to eat and keep clean to sleeping.

He told the judge he would pass up his dream of being a hillbilly singer now, in favor of any kind of job, but he did not want to return home. He explained his large family by saying his father, with 26 children, married his stepmother who had 18.

Judge Draper dismissed the loitering charge, and appointed two attorneys to help John find a job. Meanwhile, he's sleeping and eating in "protective custody" in jail.

Councilman's Son Leads at Blind School

The 16-year-old son of East Point Councilman Otis Stephens graduated as valedictorian of his class at the Georgia Academy of the Blind in Macon this week.

Otis Jr., who has earned laurels as a pianist as well as an outstanding student, plans to enter the University of Georgia in the fall. He will study law.

His sister, Ann, who is 14 years old, is also a student at the academy. Otis Jr. and Ann have appeared as guest pianists at several clubs in the Tri-Cities area in the past both as soloists and as a duet. They have both been blind since birth.

As a student, Otis Jr. has won several medals in district and state academic competition and was cited as outstanding in debating, essay, declamation and on the glee club.

Ann plans to continue studying music after graduation and hopes to be either a concert pianist or a teacher. She will be a junior at the academy next year.

Woman Leaps Under Truck for Girl; Close Call

BALTIMORE, June 16—(AP)—A 31-year-old auxiliary woman traffic officer dived under a big tractor truck today in an effort to save a seven-year-old schoolgirl run over by the vehicle.

The rear wheels of the heavy trailer came to a stop just inches from Mrs. Mary Hoy, and the girl, who was on her way to lunch.

Police found the woman clinging to Esther Wachberg under the truck. The front wheels had passed over the girl's body.

Both were taken to a hospital. Mrs. Hoy for treatment from shock and the child, critically injured, for surgery.

Pilot Dies as Jet Falls Near School

WASHINGTON, June 16—(AP)—An F-86 jet pilot was killed today when his plane crashed behind a school house at nearby Forestville, Md., as two bus loads of children were getting ready to leave.

One report said the pilot, Capt. Francis T. Evans Jr. of Washington, apparently changed course in the last seconds of his life to avoid hitting the Forestville elementary school. The plane crashed in a wooded area 300 or 400 yards away, showering fragments on the school yard.

State's Tax Hit as Drag On Industry

Representatives of Georgia industries told a legislative committee Tuesday that the state's three per cent sales tax on industrial materials is running up their costs and putting them in an unfavorable competitive status with industries in other states.

"The industrialists are seeking to have the sales tax law amended so as to exempt electricity and fuels such as natural gas and coal from the sales tax and also to exempt materials used in processing, fabrication, construction or manufacture of finished products."

Ellsworth Hall, president of the Macon Chamber of Commerce, warned the committee that southern and Northern industrialists might regard Georgia as an "industrial desert" unless the sales tax law is changed.

PARTS FREED

Under the law "component parts" of a manufactured product are exempt from the tax. But the Legislature last winter moved to tighten the sales tax law by making gas, electricity, ice, heat and fuels subject to the tax. It is the latter amendment that the industrialists are opposing before the committee created especially to study the effect of the amendment on industry and revenue.

Hall told the committee that Macon may lose a prospective manufacturer to one of several Alabama cities because of the disadvantage of Georgia's sales tax law.

Charles Dudley, representing the Associated Industries of Georgia, said this state's tax structure compares favorably with those of other states but warned that position of the sales tax on fuels might remove Georgia from such a favorable position.

POWER CHIEF

Other representatives of industry at the hearing included Charles Bloch and A. H. S. Weaver, Macon attorneys representing brick and kaolin industries; Spence Grayson and John Bouhassir of Savannah, representing Union Bag and Paper Company; Harlie Branch, president of the Georgia Power Company; Ralph Williams, Atlantic Steel Company; Robert T. Thompson, Lilly-Tulip Cup Corporation.

T. M. Forbes, the cotton textile industry's representative on the tax study committee, commented after the hearing that it is possible for big industries to move out of Georgia just as they have moved out of New England.

Sen. G. Everett Millican of Atlanta replied that he doubted if industries would leave Georgia because of the sales tax but that he could see how the tax might be the "stumbling block" that could keep some new industries out of the state.

The committee, which will meet again Sept. 10, is headed by State Revenue Commissioner Charles D. Redwine, and includes Forbes, Millican, Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook, Rep. Jack Ray of Warren; J. H. Crutchfield, Albert Dozier, head of the Revenue Department's sales tax unit; B. E. Baker, F. E. Bone, Sen. John Stoddard of Washington, Ga.; John Mavity, Rep. Mack Pickard of Muscogee; Rep. Henry P. Garrard of Wilkes and Sen. Wilson Wilkes of Adel.

College Park Postmaster Post at Stake

The Civil Service Commission is now receiving applications for the $5,370 job of College Park postmaster. Civil Service regional director O. E. Myers announced Tuesday.

This makes a total of five open first class postmaster jobs in Georgia, Myers said. Jobs at Atlanta, East Point, Marietta and Tifton were opened previously.

Meanwhile, unofficial Washington reports indicated that Burt F. Sanders, Republican mail clerk, was confirmed as acting Atlanta postmaster Tuesday.

The appointment of Sanders to the temporary job was delayed last month over what postal officials called "a technicality." Clyde Fleming has been serving as acting postmaster since Lon Livingston's retirement a year ago.

Application forms for the College Park job may be obtained at the College Park post office or at Civil Service regional headquarters, 5 Forsyth St.

Myers said the applications will be submitted first to Civil Service in Washington. Then the regional office will give qualified applicants a written test, Myers said.

Myers also announced that 79 persons have applied for the $10,800 job of assistant U. S. internal revenue director for Georgia. The tax job examination was closed Tuesday.

DeKalb Fills New Water Reservoir

The filling of DeKalb County's new 600-million-gallon water reservoir has begun, Commissioner Scott Candler said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the first of three new booster pumps to increase water pressures in peak periods has been installed at Tucker, Candler said. It was the second booster pump to be placed on the North DeKalb line, he added.

The other two new auxiliary pumps, installation of which is waiting delivery from the factory, will be placed somewhere along the Avondale and west Decatur trunk lines, Candler said.

The roof has been poured on the building that will house the county's new water filter plant, the commissioner said, and the facility should be in use in about 60 days.

The water system expansion work, which includes several new major mains, should relieve low water pressure conditions which have plagued DeKalb counties during summer dry spells, sys-

BEAST BESTED DEKALB MAN

Monument to Stubbornness Of Mule, So Legend Has It

By BILL YOUNG

In a field on Cedar Grove Road near Conley in DeKalb County stands a monument to that paragon of stubbornness, the mule. Local legend has it that the monument was built to a particularly stubborn mule—the only one that got the best of its owner, the late Walter L. Cowan.

Cowan farmed land along the Cedar Grove road for many years using only mule power to pull his plows and harrows. Before the coming of the automobile he raised hay and hauled it into Atlanta to supply the huge delivery stables.

Cowan's grandson Jack Stubbs, Bouldercrest road says that Cowan worked himself and his mules harder than any man in that area.

"Mr. Cowan had one real mean mule and I guess that's who he built the monument to," Stubbs said.

The mule monument is now a shattered pile of masonry but at one time it stood six feet high and about 15 feet long. A flight of stairs led to the flat top of the memorial and a marble plaque with an inscription was fastened to its side.

The plaque has fallen into the deep grass and weeds which have replaced the flowering shrubs that once outlined the monument. Inscribed on the plaque are these words: "Poor mule I regret that I have treated you as I have, perhaps this will inspire others to be more merciful."

Mrs. Hiram Stubbs, Cowan's sister, could not explain what her brother had in mind when he built this and 10 other monuments on the old Cowan homestead.

Jack Stubbs, the grandson, said the monuments were all built in 1934 by a local stone mason.

"He owed Mr. Cowan some rent money and Mr. Cowan let him work it out by building the monuments," Stubbs explained.

The most ornate of the memorials is the one standing on the site of Cowan's old blacksmith shop. It is dedicated to the memory of his parents.

The tiered monument stands 20 feet high and is surrounded by a low triangular wall. It was covered with marble but weather and vandals have peeled most of the slabs off.

There is an inscription to Cowan's father which reads: "On this spot my father spent his life as a blacksmith, he was willing to get his bread by the sweat of his brow, he loved his family."

A huge wagon wheel used to stick out of the side of the monument but the wooden spokes have rotted away and only the bare hub juts out of the pile of crumbling stone.

Scattered over a hundred-foot area are nine smaller monuments. Some have stairs built into the sides but all are of the same flat-top rectangular design as the mule's memorial.

One of Cowan's oldest friends, Frank Carroll, Bouldercrest Rd., described Cowan as a man who did what no one else would think of doing.

"You could never tell what Walter Cowan had in mind when he built those monuments," Carroll said. "Walter never did what you expected. He just had different ideas than most folks had," Carroll said.

Furman BISHOP

Sports Editor, The Constitution

Where's Charlie?

Jesse Outlar, who left town The Constitution's baseball writer but who will come home the boxing writer Wednesday, called the office from the training camp of Gene (Kayo) Mauch, promising middleweight, Monday about the cocktail hour. He was in a frenzy.

"I don't know what," he said, "but I've just had a communique from Mauch's managers. He says I should stand by, that I'd really have a story by game time. He won't say anything else. He's got a beady look in his eyes. He looks dangerous."

It, of course, wasn't officially scheduled, but it had become established by that time that a bout of indefinite length would be fought between the Cracker manager and Gerry (Jabbo) Lane, sturdy Chattanooga pitcher. It had to come off after Lane, whom Joe Engel pawned to Atlanta last season, stood up and snorted that he'd been throwing at Mauch's skull Sunday afternoon.

It made no difference that Lane had denied the statement. It had already appeared in the papers. It also made no difference to the dandy little manager that he was outweighed by 36 pounds. He had to go out looking for Lane now just like Gary Cooper had to go out looking for Frank Miller in "High Noon." Except this was at sunset. But it had drama in it.

You can see it now, Mauch silently pulling on his flannels, dressing room still as death, tense players sitting or moving about as if tragedy had come upon the house. Then he tightened his belt and strode out into the big park that Joe Engel built. He came into the light of the dying day and looked around for his man, and he probably spat. He saw him in right field and went for him.

The Challenge Demanded a Fight

The way I get it, it wasn't a very thrilling fight. Mauch set upon his man and allegedly clubbed him on the side of the head. Lane showed a preference for wrestling, but before any critical wounds were inflicted it was over. Must have been something like the Marciano-Walcott fan dance.

Mauch was overmatched in pounds but not in courage. His judgment was probably not exemplary, but after Lane had offered what amounted to a public challenge, there was little the guy could do. And if there's one thing Mauch isn't short on it's valor.

Lane had spit taunts at the Crackers as he pitched and beat them Sunday afternoon. He struck them out and laughed in their faces. It was colorful, of course, like Rube Waddell and Bugs Raymond. But the Crackers didn't see the humor of it. And when it came out in print the next day that Lane openly admitted throwing at Mauch, that demanded a switch to offense.

In spite of denial, there are no solid grounds for doubt that Lane said it. Eddie Barker, who quoted him in The Journal, is a reliable newspaperman. He knows the consequences of irresponsible reporting. No newspaperman in his right mind would stoop to create such a serious admission as charged to Lane. It seems apparent, then, that Lane, feeling his oats after his swagging success over the Crackers, probably did allow his arrogance to run away with him.

Pitch of the Year Down South

A guest in the Chattanooga house Sunday afternoon was Charlie Hurth, president of the Southern Association. He saw both games. He has heard or read what Lane had to say.

What appals me is that the president of any league should allow such conduct, such open defiance of rule and organization without punishment. Lane was challenging more than Mauch, to whom he has taken a sinister dislike. He was challenging Hurth, Hurth's umpires and the rules of baseball.

"Say it," he told Barker, when the sports writer told him he might be quoted, "say I said it."

If there are not grounds for an official crackdown on such conduct as that, then there must be grounds for replacement of a league president.

I won't stop at Lane and this one situation in itself. Pitchers have been throwing the beanball in the Southern Association this season as if it were the pitch of the year. The Crackers have been just as guilty as anybody. Umpires have been standing by without taking action. Hurth says a beanball isn't a beanball until an umpire says it is. While Lane threw what he confessed were beanballs at Mauch Sunday, Hurth watched. He took no action.

His umpires differed with Lane. They said he wasn't beanballing. They may decide the beanball does exist in the Southern Association when it's a little too late, like the time that Ray Chapman, the Cleveland shortstop, got hit in the head and died the next morning in the hospital.

Fowler, George Join To Top Lookouts, 4-3

Crackers Win First Road Series, 3-2;
Face Little Rock in Atlanta Thursday

By JESSE OUTLAR
Constitution Sports Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 16—It was appropriate that rubber-armed Art Fowler should pick up the rubber game victory chip—a 4-3 decision over Chattanooga Tuesday night—which gave the Atlanta Crackers their first series edge of the season on the road, three games to two.

Fowler, via excellent relief work, saved the other two games and won the series finale as a starter.

The veteran right-hander, who posted his seventh success and first since May 20, required a relief himself this time.

And Bill George, rescued by Fowler in a winning effort Sunday, responded in splendid style. Between them, the two held the Lookouts to six hits while Atlanta was getting seven.

Somewhat weary after pitching for three straight days, Fowler bumped into serious trouble with a 3-2 lead in the eighth.

With two on and one out, as a result of a single by Ellis Clary and Don Grate's double in the eighth, George rushed to the rescue. He promptly disposed of Country Brown and Roy Hawes to end the crisis.

The Crackers added a run in the ninth, but the Lookouts staged a threat again in the ninth when they put over their third unearned run.

With two down, Vern Petty's throw pulled Earl Wooten off the bag—at least umpire Jack Kernan ruled it did—to give Frank Sacka life. Tony Roig then whacked a scoring double. But George calmly erased Bruce Barnes on a grounder for the final out.

Jack Parks' ninth homer—a fierce shot over the right-field fence—jumped the Crackers out front in the second.

Then, with two out in the fourth, Dick Sinovic singled, moved down on a walk, and buzzed home when the Lookouts committed two of their four errors.

Meanwhile, Fowler, who fanned eight, set down the first 11 Lookouts in a row. Don Grate broke the spell with a bunt single in the fourth. And, in the next stanza, the Lookouts knotted the count, aided by two of Atlanta's four miscues.

Singles by Jerry Snyder and Bruce Barnes, linked with errors by Wooten and Bob Mainzer, accounted for the two markers.

Sinovic's single, followed by Parks' double, and Petty's RBI fly, put Zeke Zeiss and the Lookouts on the short end of a 2-2 count in the sixth.

Final Atlanta run crossed in the ninth when the Crackers tried the squeeze play twice in a row. After Charlie Williams tripled, George went down, attempting to hunt him home. But Wooten had more success, dumping a scoring bunt towards third.

With a 4-5 record on their latest road venture, the Crackers return home Wednesday for a holiday. They go back to work Thursday night, with Taylor Phillips (7-4) slated to face Little Rock in the first of a three-game series.

Greenglass Slugging Aids Cincinnati Split

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Cincinnati Redlegs feasted on New York pitching in the finale of a two-night doubleheader tonight, rapping out an even dozen hits for a 12-5 victory after dropping the opener, 7-5, because of three unearned runs.

Jim Greenglass put the Redlegs ahead with a three-run homer in the fifth inning, his ninth, and the locals wrapped the game up with seven runs after two were out in the sixth.

SITUATION LOOKS 'GRIM'—MILWAUKEE, June 16.—Manager Charlie Grimm of the Milwaukee Braves presents tomahawk adorned with "scalps" of other National League clubs to Mayor Frank Zeidler at the second big welcome by fans for the club. Police estimated 7,500 turned out to greet the team on its return from a successful eastern trip.

IN FINANCIAL CRISIS

Jesup Fans Shell Out To Keep Club Alive

Special to The Constitution
JESUP, June 16.—Jesup fans emptied out their pockets Tuesday night to show how much they wanted to keep professional baseball in their home town.

The Jesup Bees started the day faced with a financial crisis that would have forced them to drop out of the Class D Georgia State League after the night's game. The club, an independent operation, relies on subscriptions by local fans and businessmen to overcome its deficit at the gate and Tuesday the money had run out.

During the day, $4,700 had been raised among business men but the club was still far short of its goal.

So Tuesday night League President Bill Estroff addressed the 500 fans out at the ball park. He told them the club's predicament. And the fans came through.

They marched down to the field and contributed $1,925 to their ball club, the donations coming in fives, 10s and 25s. Only one contribution as large as $100 was reported.

Now the club is assured of operating until Aug. 1 and the Bees' president, Dr. J. A. Leaphart, is confident that enough additional money will be raised by then to help the club finish the season. Jesup's fourth in the league.

Dr. Leaphart praised the fans for their spirit in supporting the club but added that six to eight thousand dollars would be needed to keep the Bees buzzing after Aug. 1.

Estroff expressed confidence that the eight-team league would continue intact for the remainder of the season.

The Bees then selves under the evening by whipping Dublin, 4-1.

CRACKERS

Gerry Lane was quiet. Incidentally, Lane paid Mauch quite a compliment after their brief battle in the outfield Monday.

"I'll say this for the guy," said Lane, "he's quite a competitor."

Joe Engel was about the only person making noise. Joe was shouting about one of his ticket takers accepting a Japanese five dollar bill Monday night. He gave the customer change and did not discover the mistake until the fan had fled.

Don Grate, Lookout outfielder, has purchased a steak house here. . . . Umpire Andy Mitchell was struck in the throat by a foul tip off Country Brown's bat in the second inning. However, Mitchell, after first aid treatment, resumed his ball-strike duties.

Junior Wooten was taxed the regular $5 rate for being tossed out in Monday's game. It was the fourth time this season Wooten has been chased, a new record for the first baseman.

Ray Boone Shines in Tiger Win

BOSTON, June 16.—Ray Boone made an auspicious debut for Detroit tonight, banging a game-winning homer, two singles and drawing a pair of walks as the last place Tigers defeated the Boston Red Sox, 5-3. Boone was obtained by Detroit from Cleveland yesterday in a four-for-four trade.

No Matter What the Color in a Lure, It's the ACTION That Fish Go For

Some folks will tell you that the fish will bite only one color of plug in a certain area, and that some lakes will produce a good string only when trolled. Other lakes supposedly will produce fish only when they are fished deep, with live bait.

Others still are plugging lakes, according to these folks.

I had this stuff disproved to me when I told a fishing companion that a bass couldn't be caught out of a certain TVA lake on a top water plug. . . . I had been trying for a year.

This guy, Pat, wouldn't use anything but a CCR crippled minnow with the spinners off, and he carried the solunar tables in his tackle box.

Major or minor period, he would choose the period nearest sunup or sundown, even if it was during dark, and he'd work that crippled minnow just like it was . . . well, a crippled minnow.

Anyway, we caught bass for two days, especially after I had learned to ape his twitching and shivering manipulation of the green, white and red lure.

I learned then, that a bass will strike what he wants to anywhere just about the same.

That's barring great difference in stream or lake habitat as between the semi-salt lakes and rivers and clear mountain water. Even then, there's little difference.

Doubtless, I've not caught as many bass, or trout, or bream as many who read this column, but those who have caught their share of fish in the years they've been fishing will agree with one thing, I believe. It's the ACTION in a lure more than the color, finish or what-have-you that catches fish.

By way of illustration, Guy Stancil, in Gainesville, sold a Lazy like to a customer who took the thing to Hiwassee Lake at Murphy and returned next day to ask if the paint finish were guaranteed.

It seems that 16 big pike had chewed the thing somewhat while our friend was hauling them in.

Guy said no, that there was not any guarantee, but that he'd give the man another plug. And he did. And he put the old chewed-up one in his own tackle box and paid the cash register for the new one he gave the pike-killer.

I tried to get that plug from from throughout Georgia and north Florida. Teams of one professional and three amateurs will be out for cash and prizes.

The run for the K. S. Varn Trophy begins Thursday with the first 18 holes counting as the qualifying round and the first round of the invitation. White reports this was done to cut the final round Sunday to a more pleasant 18-hole round and give visiting golfers a chance to get back on the road home earlier than usual.

Ward and Goodloe as early favorites are joined by Bob White, who is Okefenokee Club champ, and Sonny George who gave last year's champ, Frank Stevenson Jr. of Savannah, some hot competition in the final 18.

Stevenson is unable to defend his crown this year since he is representing the University of Georgia in the National Collegiate Golf Tournament. The first Okefenokee Invitation champ was Arnold Blum of Macon.

Avila Moves Past Fox in All-Star Vote

CHICAGO, June 16—(AP)—Cleveland's Bobby Avila has captured the American League second base lead from Chicago's Nellie Fox in the latest tabulation of the All-Star baseball poll.

Avila, 27, piled up 2,992 votes against 2,804 for the 28-year-old Fox in the balloting which will name the starting American and National lineups for the All-Star game at Cincinnati July 14.

The poll continues until July 3. Milwaukee's surprising Braves, who grabbed five top National loop positions in the first returns, Tuesday had only one leader—third baseman Ed Mathews with 3,497 votes, a margin of 883 over New York's Alvin Dark.

Mickey Mantle, center fielder of the rampaging New York Yankees, still is the poll's best voter with 3,968. Next with 3,594 is second baseman Red Schoendienst of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Home State Swim Stars Go in Peach

Special to The Constitution
LaGRANGE, June 16 — Top bracket Georgia swimming stars from Atlanta and Athens head the list of early entries for the Seventh Annual Southern Peach Swimming and Diving Championships here June 26-27.

The Emory Aquatic Club is sending a 12-man team but smaller delegations from the Athens Swimming Club and the Atlanta Athletic Club include potential point-makers.

Final entries for the two-day meet aren't expected here until Tuesday, so no definite count can be made now. But requests for room reservations by clubs around the country lead meet sponsors to estimate a field of 250.

Three former Southern Peach champions and an annual contender give the Atlanta A. C. team punch. Gail Benton, senior girls' diving champion for the past three years, will defend her title along with Elaine Fladger, the backstroke champ, and Mary Link, a former breaststroke finalist. Mary competed with Purdue University's champion relay team during the school year.

Another top Atlanta A. C. entry is Penny Barnett in the freestyle events.

Two Southeastern scholastic champions may appearhead the Athens S. C. team, which will also include members of the University of Georgia varsity.

The prep paddlers, both students at Athens High, are Tom Blakely, Southeastern backstroke record holder, and Bob Langley, Southern and Southeastern breaststroke champion.

Entries off the Bulldog varsity are Bryan Head in the backstroke, Hal Stolz in the breaststroke and Marshall Floyd in the freestyle sprints. Floyd will go after the National Junior AAU 100-yard title, one of the three national events on the program. Others are the women's 100-yard backstroke and women's 400-yard freestyle relay.

Cronin Memory Poor on Hubbell Strikeout Record

BOSTON, June 16.—A letter from PFC M. Juliano in Korea Tuesday asked the Boston American's sports staff: "Who were the five men in a row Carl Hubbell struck out in the 1934 All-Star game?"

It was referred to general manager Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox.

"Let's see," said Cronin. "First Babe Ruth, then Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx and Al Simmons. I can't recall the fifth guy."

But baseball records could.

The fifth was one Joe Cronin, then Washington player-manager.

MacKinnon was pushed all the way to the 18th hole before subduing Birmingham's Bee McWane, runner-up in the recent Southern Women's Amateur. Bee held a 3-up lead at nine but could not stand off MacKinnon's strong finish.

Nearest thing to an upset was Marnie Polk's 19-hole triumph over fellow amateur Pat Devany of Grosse Ile, Mich. Miss Polk, Tennessee State champion, saw her opponent square the match with a birdie three at 18, but came back to clinch the right to face tournament favorite Louise Suggs Wednesday at 9:30 a. m.

By taking the extra hole with a par four, Miss Devany's putter failed her on this one, taking three after getting on the carpet in two.

In addition to Suggs and Kirby, Atlanta still has Mrs. Grady McDonald in the running. The former city titlist beat East Lake's Mrs. Larry Martin, 4 and 3, and will meet another former Atlantan, Major Pat Grant of Ft. McClellan, Ala., next. Major Grant, a five-time Oklahoma state champion before the ladies back home barred her from the tournament, downed Mrs. Peggy Ciriaco, Miami, Fla., 4 and 3.

Although a steady rain pelted the championship flighters for about four hours Tuesday, scoring was considerably better than Monday's qualifying efforts.

Doran was out in 34, four under women's par and two under regulation for men. A double bogey at 10 upped her score but she was still even with men's par when the match ended. Suggs was even with men's par for the 12 holes her match went, while Pung was one under when she closed out Miss Hampton.

Wednesday's card should provide a series of slam-bang battles. In addition to the Berg-Rawls scrap, Mrs. Pung should find the going tough against Miss Lesser. The same goes for Doran, who must dispose of Miss Smith to remain in the title chase.

Kirby faces JoAnn Prentice of Birmingham, Jean Hopkins,

Cleveland, Ohio, squares off against Bonnie Randolph of Columbus, Ohio, in another pair of promising skirmishes. MacKinnon could have trouble with Elizabeth Hicks of Los Angeles too.

Quarter-finals are scheduled Thursday, semis Friday and the 36-hole finals Saturday.

Tomorrow's Leaders Fix Their Goals

By JIMMY WALKER

Charity wards for private hospitals supported by taxes, Protestant confessionals, and a wider interest in politics were visions for Atlanta's future expressed Tuesday night by four of the city's "outstanding leaders of tomorrow."

The four: Dr. Tully Blalock, Dr. John Brokhoff, Hoke Smith and George Goodwin, spoke at a banquet honoring the 100 young men chosen recently as Atlanta's future leaders.

They explained the problems and possibilities of medicine, religion, politics and civic affairs before some 200 members and guests of the Atlanta Women's Chamber of Commerce at the Women's Club.

THREE QUESTIONS

Citizens of Atlanta have asked the medical profession to seek answers to three major questions, said Dr. Blalock, secretary of the Fulton County Medical Society:

1. Cost of medical care.
2. A doctor to come when called.
3. Right to receive accurate medical information.

Dr. Blalock also suggested that the caliber of medical care given in Atlanta's private hospitals could be improved by equipping them with public-financed charity wards.

CHURCH CLINICS

Dr. John Brokhoff, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, forecast a need for church clinics with a staff of clergymen, physicians, and psychologists.

"What I would most like to see," Dr. Brokhoff said, "is a Protestant confessional begun. People must fashion some kind of confessional before their minister to relieve the pent up feelings building in us."

Jack Tarver, general manager of Atlanta Newspapers, Inc., was master of ceremonies.

Miss Ruth McMillan, Miss Bernice Bangert and Mrs. Winifred Webb of the Chamber's public affairs committee sponsored the meeting. Mrs. Gertrude Stanford, president, presided.

Decatur Weighs Block Rezoning On Church Street

Block rezoning for business property on Church Street was considered Tuesday night by the Decatur City Commission, which called for a petition voicing the sentiment of owners.

Mayor A. Mell Turner said the commission at its next meeting would discuss rezoning of both sides of Church Street between Trinity Place and Howard Street if a substantial number of property owners signed a proposed petition calling for the move.

The city plans to establish its second municipal parking lot on property at Howard and Church if the block is rezoned, Turner said.

Knowles Addresses PTA Meet

ATHENS, June 16 (AP)—More than 200 members of Georgia Parent-Teacher Associations were urged tonight to initiate a "renaissance in democracy" by making their own groups more democratic.

Malcolm S. Knowles, administrative co-ordinator of the adult education association, working with PTA members gathered at the University of Georgia, classed the PTA with church meetings and civic clubs and called them the "laboratories of democracy."

"In these face-to-face meetings people honestly learn habits of participation which carry over into civic life," he said. "The way people participate in these groups affects the way they participate in the political scene."

OPENING SESSION

Knowles was a speaker for the opening session of the 31st annual work conference of the Georgia PTA. The conference will continue into Thursday.

In his remarks, Knowles called for a return to the town meeting idea in all groups with more give and take and less "leading and following."

"Too often," he said, "it is the job of followers to follow and the job of leaders to dictate."

Adding impetus to his plea for more democracy in groups, he asserted that such democracy would solve the problem of getting group members to assume responsibility.

FEEL RESPONSIBILITY

People feel responsibility for doing things which they had a part in planning, he recounted. "But not since the Boston Tea Party have Americans liked taxation without representation."

He rapped the formalities of group meetings dictated by Robert's rules of order. He declared that these rules force people to be argumentative rather than co-operative and set up barriers against working together.

Conference sessions Wednesday and Thursday will consist of small group meetings. Organization, program, tools and techniques of PTA groups will be discussed.

Mrs. M. M. Kandel of Savannah is president of the Georgia PTA Congress.

Elks Auxiliary To Sponsor Party

A bridge and canasta party will be sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary of the East Point Elks Lodge at 8 p. m. Thursday, June 25, at the Elks Club, 118 W. Cleveland Ave.

Warrens Furnish House With Paintings, Pottery

By DOTTY LUNDY

Two years ago the Ferdinand Warrens moved into a five-room faculty cottage on the Agnes Scott campus with little in the way of household furnishings but paintings and pottery.

A few months later, with the paints on the walls and the pots on the shelves, plus gleanings from second-hand stores and clearance sales, they hardly recognized the once-drab little house.

First the Warrens tackled the living room and adjoining studio-dining room. An old claw-foot dining table from a used furniture store made a fine coffee table in the spacious gaslight-era parlor. Moonshine jugs from a mountain trip were turned into lamp bases for Mrs. Warren's Johnson grass shades. They bought rush rugs for the floors, rattan and canvas chairs.

Then the couple scraped an oak chest and drop leaf table down to the natural grain. Mr. Warren, nationally recognized for his paintings, is an artist with mediums other than brushes and oils. Several candelabra in the house were twisted from clothesline wire.

He fitted a flush door with pipe legs for a dining table. The hall mobile, a sensitive study of the moon peering through autumn foliage, was the result of a five-day siege with the flu. "I just got well too soon," Mr. Warren laughs, insisting the dangling abstract is unfinished.

Some of Mr. Warren's more recent paintings were done with a wax pigment after heat had been applied, resembling ancient Egyptian art. Not content to stop with his canvases, he makes his own picture frames. His gesso-red clay process, giving a burnished gold finish, might have come from Italy.

Resourceful Mrs. Warren bought lengths of lumber, stacking them up with brick, to provide book shelves in the studio. Bedroom walls facing the chartreuse room were painted yellow, the other two left blue-green. A back room "putter shop" is gray.

The Warrens brought the back porch wing, which was tacked on in fairly recent years, into the rest of the house by converting the window into shelves. The kitchen is yellow with orange draperies—the porch also orange. "Just like the inside of a pumpkin," as one faculty wife remarked.

Watson, Nichols Vows Said

Malcolm W. Anderson gave his niece, Miss Mary Ann Watson, in marriage when she became the bride of Dale Nichols Tuesday evening at the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist Church. Dr. Monroe Swilley Jr. was the officiant.

After the ceremony, the bride's mother, Mrs. Jesse O. Watson, was hostess at a reception in the church parlors. Mr. Nichols is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Nichols.

The lovely bride chose a gown which combined an Alencon lace blouse with a duchesse satin skirt fashioned with a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil cascaded from a cap of matching lace and she carried a bouquet of white butterfly orchids and valley lilies.

Miss Martha Blanche Watson was her sister's maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Helen Thompson, Miss Frances Brown, Mrs. Paul H. Nichols Jr. and Mrs. Walter D. Hodde.

Paul H. Nichols was best man for his son, and serving as usher-groomsman were Paul Nichols Jr., Jon B. Simonton, John Noble Arnold, Benny Cogburn and Jim Weir.

Mrs. G. E. Mende kept the bride's book at the reception.

After a honeymoon at Ponte Vedra, Fla., the couple will reside in the Lindcrest Apartments at 2431 Adina Drive. Mr. Nichols is employed by the P. H. Nichols & Co.

Mr. Mauk was graduated from Georgia Southwestern Junior College and from the University of Georgia with a degree in journalism. He was a member of Alpha Phi Omega honorary society and Phi Kappa Phi fraternity.

Muscles Shape Waistline

By IDA JEAN KAIN

While the waistline appears to be the first to succumb to the dreaded middle spread, actually the root of the trouble is lack of tone in the bias girdle muscles.

To get a general idea of how tone in these muscles shapes the waist, place thumbs together, fingers spread apart and curving. That's roughly the way the side-front abdominals span the figure and angle upwards to insert sawtooth fashion to midriff ribs. It's easy to see that when these muscles become flabby, the waist bulks out.

FIGURE TEST

Before we ease into specific exercise to tone the oblique muscles, take this figure test. . . . Stand sideways to a mirror, and pull up and in strongly with the girdle muscles, making the middle muscles take the action.

This "slims up" the waist. It's plain to see that when you settle into slumped posture, the waist looks dumpy. Keeping those muscles bracingly on the job through good posture will make it easy to control the waist measurement.

RESTORE TONE

The following exercise restores tone to the muscles responsible for the waist widening in the first place. . . .

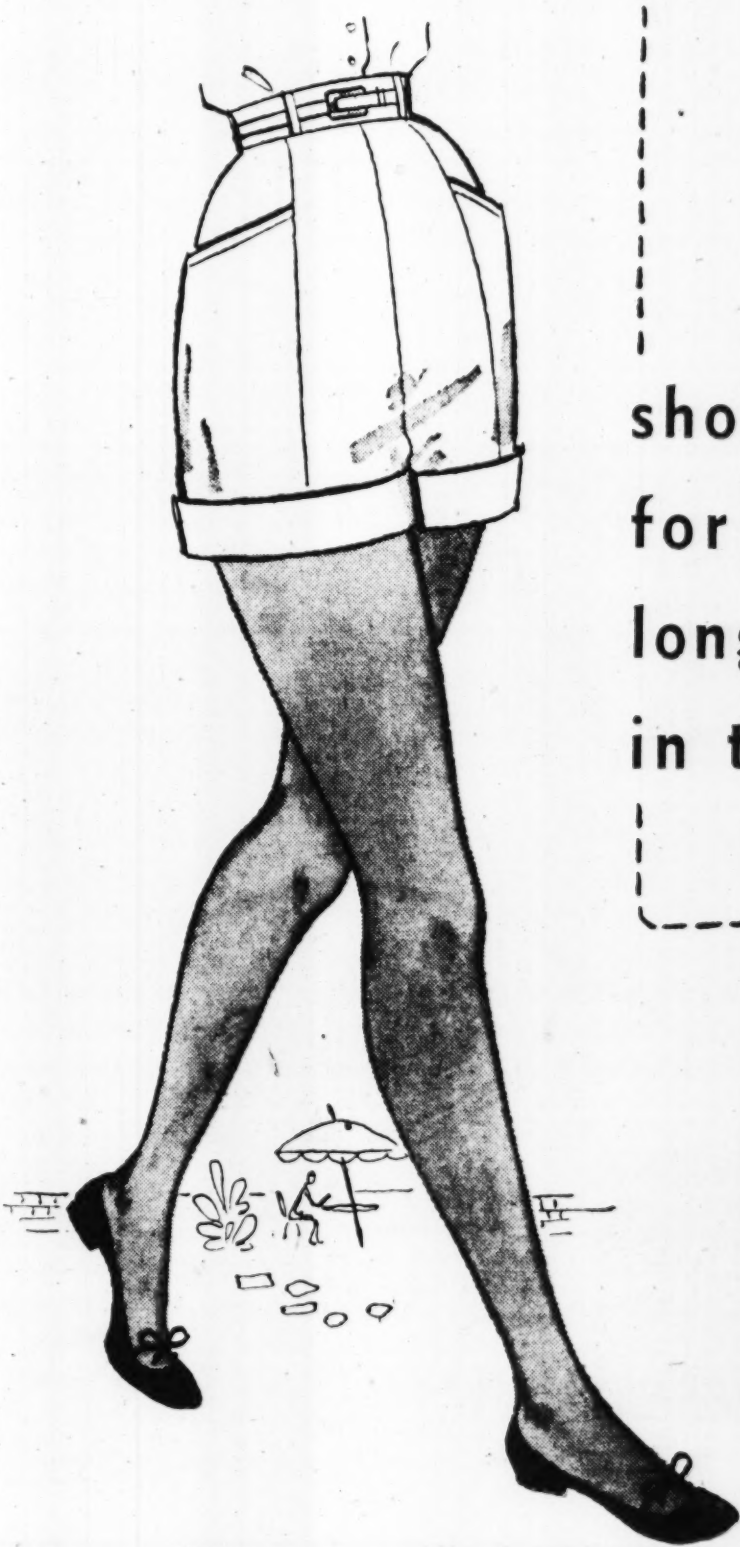

Position: Lying on back, feet elevated to low bench.

Movement: Bend knees and forcibly separate the knees, but make the girdle muscles take the action, repeat a half dozen times. From this same position raise hips slightly off the floor, and tilt them sideways, pulling in strongly with the side-front muscles, for those are the muscles you are aiming to tone. Back to position, tilt hips to opposite side, again pulling in forcibly with side-front muscles. Repeat 12 times.

Position: Sitting on floor, legs straight out in front of body, hands clasped behind head, elbows bent.

Movement: First pull strongly up and in with middle muscles and hold, as you twist gently to the right, half way round, and bending forward . . . but holding strong up-and-in pull, touch left elbow to left knee. Reverse action. Later touch elbow to alternate knee. This involves twisting and is not safe if your lower back is weak.

Miss Davis Is Married

Mr. Luchsinger's father was his best man, and Mrs. William Scott was her sister's attendant.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina of lace and tulle over satin. Her veil was attached to a bandeau of orange blossoms and she carried a Testament adorned with white orchids, tuberoses and stephanotis.

A reception followed the ceremony and the couple left for a honeymoon in the North Carolina mountains. They will reside in Charleston, W. Va.

Bringing Up Baby

Hints Collected by
Mrs. Ann Cullen
(Mother of 5)

Simple toys often amuse babies more than elaborate ones. A metal cup and spoon make a delightful noise. Spoons strung on sturdy cord are fun. Telescoping plastic glasses or coasters entertain little ones.

Special, new foods are interesting, too. When baby has a few teeth, he's all set for "chewing" — provided you give him foods meant just for that stage. Gerber's Junior Foods have a tender, minced texture that new teeth can manage nicely. Babies enjoy the appetizing colors and appealing choice of Gerber's Junior Fruits, Vegetables, Soups, Desserts — and Meats.

Toy tip: When baby develops to the stage where it's great fun to drop toys, here's a helpful hint from a young mother in New Mexico. Tie toys on strings to carriage, high chair, play pen. Easier (and cleaner!) to retrieve for you... just as much fun for baby.

Teething time? Gerber's Teething Biscuits can be mighty helpful. They're so firm, baby gets plenty of chewing satisfaction. So smooth, they're gentle for tender gums. Shaped so they're easy for little hands to hold. Nice for you, too—they don't readily fall apart, make less mess. Individually wrapped—easy to tuck into your pocket when you take baby out.

Babies thrive on being included with the whole family when possible. Maybe your young one's ready to sit in his high chair at family meals. Could be better for him to eat beforehand. But you can keep him busy with a toy or two... or perhaps a nice smooth bone. (Won't give him much nourishment, but he'll probably enjoy learning the flavor!)

of Mary P. Willingham School. Thirty-five graduates and three teachers of the girls' school that formerly operated in the North Georgia mountains got together. The group hopes to locate other "grads" before next year's reunion.

Willingham School Alumnae Remember 'Bloomer Days'

Thirty-five ex-bloomer girls gathered for luncheon recently in a downtown Atlanta hotel.

Dressed in fashionable cotton and silk frocks, the feminine gathering got lots of giggles from reminiscing over their middy blouse, bloomer and high-silk stocking school days.

They were all "old grads" of Mary P. Willingham School for Girls in Blue Ridge, Ga.

The reuniting group was meeting in Atlanta because their alma mater went out of operation in 1931.

Dr. L. C. Cutts of Vienna, son of the late Dr. W. L. Cutts, a former president of the school, came to the luncheon with Mrs. Cutts, a former student and teacher there herself.

Perfume That Clings

Q.—Dear Penny: I adore perfume, but for some reason or other its fragrance just does not last on me. I have told several of my friends that I want a new perfume, but first I must find out about a lasting one.—Mrs. A. W.

A.—A particularly good idea for women who claim that perfume does not "stay with them" is a Liquid Skin Sachet. It smooths on the skin very easily, and lingers longer because of its sachet base. It has a slower rate of diffusion and evaporation than any other type of fragrance. Try this Houbigant Chantilly Liquid Skin Sachet. Only $1.85 plus tax at better stores.

Celestine Sibley Judge Gives A Warning

They've come around from papers and magazines all over the country to write about the horrors of the Georgia Training School for Girls—and once again our state won't come out of it looking too pretty.

Still it seems to follow that we have to be horrified into action. It took hair-clipping and escapes and name-calling to begin the long, slow haul of making the training school a humane institution with rehabilitation instead of punishment as its goal.

And now it seems that a new horror lies in wait for us at the juvenile detention home. Judge W. W. Woolfolk has asked for the money to hire additional staff members to care for the youngsters who are brought into the court and held in the detention rooms upstairs until their cases can be disposed of.

The county turned him down.

Now the judge reports that guns and knives have been found in the place. The detention quarters are jammed with 40 youngsters. The place is understaffed from the standpoint of simple lock-'em-up-and-watch-'em care, as if that were enough. For real care, the kind that distinguishes a juvenile detention home from a common jail, the judge needs at least four more people.

He has warned us. Perhaps it's true that the county, under pressure from successive grand juries to cut expenses, can't see adding $25,000 to the juvenile court's budget. But when a riot breaks out in the home, when children are maimed or killed or an attendant is knifed or shot in the back, we'll do something. When the situation has become a national scandal, citizens will once more be horrified into action.

The Fulton juvenile court is one of the best in the country and certainly in Georgia. It pioneered in a day when youngsters were sent to chain gangs. It is still pioneering.

Judge Woolfolk has a citizens' advisory board dedicated to the proposition that the juvenile court's purpose is to save children. They are constantly studying improved methods of dealing with young delinquents. They feel very strongly the need of closer supervision, better casework and 24-hour care in the detention home.

The loud-voiced citizens who have expressed themselves against "coddling young rowdies" should know that not all the children who wind up in juvenile court are rowdies. Many of them are terrified infants who have been abandoned or neglected. I've been there and seen scrawny little girls looking peaked and old for their age—trapped through no fault of their own. I've seen the policemen take in lost children at night when there was nobody on duty but the night watchman and one harassed attendant with all she could do to keep an eye on the rougher ones upstairs.

The juvenile court is a public institution and it needs the understanding of an interested public. If the current grand jury does investigate the detention home, as has been urged, and does recommend the financing of the needs Judge Woolfolk has pointed out, all of us should give it our support.

The best buy today in an automobile is a good used car from a good Used Car Dealer.
I believe in the used car business and here is why I can sell you a better used car.
I am an independent dealer. I have all makes and models. I do not have to take in undesirable used cars to sell a particular make. I buy nothing but the best and turn down the rest.

A Rhyme a Day

"Send for free catalog listing over 2,000 vacation resorts at mountains, beaches and historic spots and select the one that best fits your planned expenditures."—Advt.

"At Sunset Camp, the nights are cool... the days are bright and bracing... the golf course and the swimming pool... the fishing and boat racing... the bridge paths and shady nooks... are pleasant and appealing... and food, prepared by finest cooks... brings that contented feeling."

So read the brochures that you scan... all this is quite attractive... and very restful for a man... who isn't over-active... the prospect has a pleasant view... and, in anticipation... you think that something strange and new... may come with this vacation.

But always, it's the same old stuff... you hear the guests complaining... the food, itself, is bad enough... but half the time it's raining... the fish refuse to take a hook... the golf course is a shambles... and you can't find a shady nook... in 40 miles of rambles.

This time of year we scan the list... of places for vacations... when, actually, they just exist... in our imaginations.

KNOW YOUR GEORGIA

By C. J. Holleran

One of the most encouraging steps forward in public health improvement during the last century has been the gradual elimination of superstition. All of the advantages achieved by the development of life-saving drugs would be fruitless if the people who need help the most would not accept it. A typical example of what the medical men had to face occurred in Atlanta in 1866. Smallpox and cholera had become epidemic, and to add to the burden of the crushed city, hundreds of ill and starving people poured in from rural Georgia, pleading for medical care. The Atlanta medical college was one of the best institutions of its kind. Its staff was composed of the city's foremost physicians. Dr. Willis Westmoreland offered its facilities and the services of its staff to the city without charge to give the poor the attention they needed so badly. City Council was delighted and deeply grateful. Pandemonium followed the announcement because the ignorant, superstitious paupers believed the doctors and surgeons wanted their bodies for dissection! Council was forced to pass a resolution declining the offer!

Goren on Bridge

Neither vulnerable. North of one spade. North bid one no trump, tho he held but a partial stopper in diamonds. This was preferable to a raise with this evenly balanced hand of minimum strength. The raise by opening bidder of partner's response should be made only on hands that contain some slight additional values or at least four of partner's trumps. When South competed to three clubs, North, of course, preferred to return to his partner's suit, and South carried on to game despite the fact that North had failed to offer an immediate raise.

West opened the queen of diamonds, and South ruffed the second round of that suit. He observed that if he drew trumps he could cash only nine tricks: five spades, three hearts, and the ace of clubs. The tenth trick must therefore be developed in the club suit. There is an alternate line of play, which involves reversing the dummy, making

Monument to Stubbornness Of Mule, So Legend Has It

By BILL YOUNG

In a field on Cedar Grove Road near Conley in DeKalb County stands a monument to that paragon of stubbornness, the mule. Local legend has it that the monument was built to a particularly stubborn mule—the only one that got the best of its owner, the late Walter L. Cowan.

Cowan farmed land along the Cedar Grove road for many years using only mule power to pull his plows and harrows. Before the coming of the automobile he raised hay and hauled it into Atlanta to supply the huge delivery stables.

Cowan's grandson Jack Stubbs, Bouldercrest road says that Cowan worked himself and his mules harder than any man in that area.

"Mr. Cowan had one real mean mule and I guess that's who he built the monument to," Stubbs said.

The mule monument is now a shattered pile of masonry but at one time it stood six feet high and about 15 feet long. A flight of stairs led to the flat top of the memorial and a marble plaque with an inscription was fastened to its side.

The plaque has fallen into the deep grass and weeds which have replaced the flowering shrubs that once outlined the monument.

Inscribed on the plaque are these words: "Poor mule I regret that I have treated you as I have, perhaps this will inspire others to be more merciful."

Mrs. Hiram Stubbs, Cowan's sister, could not explain what her brother had in mind when he built this and 10 other monuments on the old Cowan homestead.

Jack Stubbs, the grandson, said the monuments were all built in 1934 by a local stone mason.

"He owed Mr. Cowan some rent money and Mr. Cowan let him work it out by building the monuments," Stubbs explained.

The most ornate of the memorials is the one standing on the site of Cowan's old blacksmith shop. It is dedicated to the memory of his parents.

The tiered monument stands 20 feet high and is surrounded by a low triangular wall. It was covered with marble but weather and vandals have peeled most of the slabs off.

There is an inscription to Cowan's father which reads: "On this spot my father spent his life as a blacksmith, he was willing to get his bread by the sweat of his brow, he loved his family."

A huge wagon wheel used to stick out of the side of the monument but the wooden spokes have rotted away and only the bare hub juts out of the pile of crumbling stone.

Scattered over a hundred-foot area are nine smaller monuments. Some have stairs built into the sides but all are of the same flat-top rectangular design as the mule's memorial.

One of Cowan's oldest friends, Frank Carroll, Bouldercrest Rd., described Cowan as a man who did what no one else would think of doing.

"You could never tell what Walter Cowan had in mind when he built those monuments," Carroll said. "Walter never did what you expected. He just had different ideas than most folks had," Carroll said.

DeKalb Fills New Water Reservoir

The filling of DeKalb County's new 600-million-gallon water reservoir has begun, Commissioner Scott Candler said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the first of three new booster pumps to increase water pressures in peak periods has been installed at Tucker, Candler said. It was the second booster pump to be placed on the North DeKalb line, he added.

The other two new auxiliary pumps, installation of which is waiting delivery from the factory, will be placed somewhere along the Avondale and west Decatur trunk lines, Candler said.

The roof has been poured on the building that will house the county's new water filter plant, the commissioner said, and the facility should be in use in about 60 days.

The water system expansion work, which includes several new major mains, should relieve low water pressure conditions which have plagued DeKalb counties during summer dry spells, system officials have said.

Stone Mountain Draw Undimmed by Hot Sun

The blazing summer sun, which drives thousands to swimming pools and beaches, fails to crimp the ardor of Stone Mountain visitors to climb to the top of the huge mass of granite.

A welcome relief, for those hardy enough to brave the shimmering sides of the famous Georgia mountain, is soaking tired and steaming feet in the pools which dot the top of the massive boulder.

Week ends find thousands eager to climb the well-worn path up the steep sides of the mountain where they can gaze at the surrounding scenery and enjoy the cooling breezes that swirl around the mountain top.

Douglas McCurdy, chairman of the State Parks Authority estimates that the mountain attracts as many as 5,000 visitors each week end during the summer.

Picnicking is one of the favorite hot weather activities around the mountain. The base of the mountain is dotted with the rough sites for cooking and the only necessities are a few straightened coat hangers, some "weenies" and a few pine cones for fuel.

Partway up the mountain are groves of gnarled pines which provide shade for the hot and weary climber.

Donald Wesley of Wilkes-

Barre, Pa., was enjoying the shade of the trees and commenting on the beauties of the mountain.

"I was raised in the Poconos but this mountain is as good as any mountain scenery I've ever seen," Wesley said.

Another out-of-state visitor, Bill Young of Long Island, N. Y., commented that although Stone Mountain was not as high as Lookout Mountain or as pretty as the Adirondacks, the steep side of Stone Mountain was really impressive.

"This is really a beautiful place," Young said.

Berry pickers find the base of the mountain over by the carving of a lush source of blackberries. The carving itself is a never-ending source of curiosity to the sight-seers. Amateur photographers set up their equipment and shoot pictures of the equestrian figure of Lee now barely discernible against the side of the mountain.

But it is still the long hard climb to the top of the mountain that seems to attract the throngs.

Three Teams Tie for Lead In 'Y' Loop

Three teams were tied for first place in the men's division of the DeKalb YMCA Interchurch Softball League this week, as plans were made for the scheduling of games in two more brackets.

Leaders of teams in the DeKalb Interchurch league sponsored by the DeKalb-DeKalb "Y" will meet at 7:30 p. m. Thursday at "Y" headquarters to set the opening date of the city league.

A woman's division of the DeKalb church league will be organized during a meeting of leaders at 7:30 p. m. Friday at the "Y."

At the end of the second week of play in the DeKalb men's division, teams from Avondale First Baptist, Avondale Baptist and First Nazarene topped that league.

Ingliside Presbyterian was in fourth place and Fellowship Class of Decatur First Methodist was in fifth. Tied for sixth place were Scott Boulevard Baptist, Oak Grove Methodist and Emory Presbyterian.

Games are played at 8 p. m. on the Avondale High School diamond. The following games are scheduled:

June 18, Scott Boulevard Baptist vs. Ingliside Presbyterian; June 19, First Nazarene vs. Fellowship Class; June 22, Avondale First Baptist vs. Oak Grove Methodist; and June 23, Avondale Baptist vs. Ingliside Presbyterian.

DeKalb Library 'Story Hour' Program Set

The "Story Hour" program at the Decatur Library has begun in connection with the Decatur-DeKalb summer reading program for school students which will continue through the summer months.

The "Story Hour" will continue through the second week in August and is conducted by the Decatur Parents Teachers Association council.

The state-wide theme of the summer reading program is "Expressways to Good Reading" and library officials said a number of books have been made available to suit all reading interest.

Also in connection with the summer program is a music appreciation hour which began recently at the library. The music program will also continue through the second week in August.

The story hour and music appreciation hour are under the direction of Miss Dorothy Miller, boy's and girl's librarian.

Women's Club To Hear Cherry

DeKalb county school superintendent Jim Cherry will speak on education Friday to the Decatur Women's Club. It will be the club's last regular meeting until September.

Mrs. A. B. Lee, education committee chairman, arranged the program and Mrs. William Bell and Mrs. Paul Graves will present a special musical program.

Wilson Sees No Stepup By Allies

Repeats AF Funds Are Adequate

and declared the Air Force's combat strength would not suffer.

ADEQUATE FUNDS
Wilson, who said he had not seen the Air Force's revised request before it was sent to the Senate subcommittee, restated his view that there were adequate funds in the budget. He said there had been no cutbacks in production of combat aircraft but said the Air Force is not to be permitted to order as many planes for future delivery because the United States doesn't have to make up its mind right now. The Air Force has contended it needs larger funds to plan its build-up and order ahead.

Wilson resisted various attempts by reporters to get a detailed estimate of what a Korean truce would mean in terms of troops committed to the area and the defense budget.

He did say, however, that even if actual combat stops in Korea it would take six months or longer to wind up prisoner exchange and other details.

BASIC PROBLEMS

"While the shooting will have stopped," he said, "basic problems will have to be adjusted." He said he anticipated there would be a "bring-the-boys-home" drive following an armistice but said he wanted to repeat that "that can't be done safely."

As to how much the present budget before Congress would be affected by a Korean armistice,

MAY GET UN JOB—
NEW YORK, June 16—Dr. Luther Evans, librarian of Congress, today was recommended as director general of the UN educational, scientific and cultural organization by its executive council. He must be confirmed by UNESCO's general conference in Paris in July.

Wilson was cautious. He said some funds could be cut but added they won't be as much as some persons will expect.

Wilson was asked if he thought there had been "traitors" in the Pentagon who had caused the ammunition shortage. He was told that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy had said as much. Wilson said the reporter should ask McCarthy but added "as far as I'm concerned there are no traitors in this building. If I thought there were they would be kicked out pretty quickly."

nist housing project, from losing their tempers.

The procession wound three miles through East Berlin to the former Nazi Aviation Ministry, now administrative headquarters of the Soviet Zone. People's (Communist) policemen along the way ferreted traffic so the demonstrators could proceed unhampered.

The five thousand massed against the locked doors of the government building. They demanded to see Grotewohl and Communist Secretary General Walter Ulbricht.

Speakers belonging to the Communist Trade Union Federation and the Communist Free German Youth shouted, "We demand lower prices and reduction of the work quotas."

Communist Agitprop (agitation propagandists) circulated through the crowd, explaining in loud voice that "Unity of workers is the important thing" and exhorting, "Look at what Socialist unity has already created for us."

SEES LEADERS

Word was sent to the crowd that its demand to see Grotewohl and Ulbricht could not be granted, but a small delegation would be received.

For nearly two hours, the demonstrators hung about the building. Then leaders ordered a march back to work. This was acclaimed by clenched fist salutes and hands clapped overhead in the Communist Youth "friendship greeting."

There was nothing phony about the discontent with Communist speed-ups and sagging living standards which East Berlin workers expressed today.

But the parade itself, blowing off proletarian steam, was as unreal as a mob scene in a movie studio.

UN evacuees in two and a half years." A tabulation of evacuation flights indicated that about 2,500 wounded Allied soldiers, mostly South Koreans, were flown from the front to hospitals in Southern Korea and Japan.

Belief grew that the Chinese offensive may be delaying the drawing of a ceasefire line, and thus delaying an armistice.

General Clark went ahead with plans for the truce, however, by announcing that Maj. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan will serve as the senior UN member of the joint military commission which will enforce the terms of an armistice.

The truce negotiators met on schedule at Panmunjom today at 11 a. m. (9 p. m. Atlanta Time Tuesday) and recessed 20 minutes later without giving any indication of what was discussed.

Douglas' Decision on Rosenbergs Due Today

day, the day after the adjournment of the court for the summer recess. Instead they buzzed with uneasy activity incident to the Rosenberg case.

Reporters and cameramen kept a wearisome vigil throughout the day and court officials were on duty overtime. Blocs of tourists steered through the buildings by guides brightened up when they were told that behind the tall brass gates that close off the area where the justices' chambers are, Douglas was wrestling alone with the problem of whether to give the spies a temporary reprieve until the Supreme Court could again consider new appeals from adverse decisions of the lower courts.

Justice Douglas agreed to hear the plea for a stay after the high court had rejected at its regular session yesterday a similar plea by the Rosenbergs' attorneys and, at a rare special session called late in the day by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson, had refused to hear arguments by counsel for the spies. Any justice of the high court has power to grant a stay on his own responsibility at any time. The court as a whole would decide later, however, whether it would hear the new appeals.

Justice Douglas received the formal petition for a stay at 10 a. m. from John H. Finerty,

Prof. Malcom Sharp of the University of Chicago law school, and Miss Gloria Agrin, associated with Bloch as counsel for the Rosenbergs.

Shortly thereafter he also received an application for a writ of habeas corpus from Fyke Farmer, a Nashville, Tenn., attorney, and Daniel G. Marshall, a Los Angeles lawyer, representing Irwin Edelman, a private citizen of Los Angeles. Judge Irving R. Kaufman, in the New York Federal Court yesterday, rejected a similar plea by Farmer on the grounds that he was an intruder and an interloper in the case and had no authorization to represent the Rosenbergs. Justice Douglas, however, heard Farmer and Marshall briefly and permitted them to file an impromptu handwritten brief. The chief arguments of these attorneys were that David Greenglass and his wife, who were charged with the Rosenbergs, had been denied an open trial; that the 1917 espionage statute under which the Rosenbergs were tried and convicted had been superseded by the Atomic Energy Act, and that secret testimony taken at the trial had never been shown to the Supreme Court.

Drama Group Announces Play Series

The Decatur YMCA drama group has announced plans for at least four plays during the summer and a series of workshops scheduled have begun.

The drama group, directed by Jerry John, will open its summer program with two one-act plays June 26 at Druid Hills School. One will be "Cabbages," a comedy, and the other, to be selected, will be a play written by a member of the group.

Later the organization will present "The Robe," "The Song of Bernadette," "Annie Get Your Gun," and will probably close the season with "You Can't Kiss Caroline," a new play which has never been staged in Atlanta.

Throughout the summer the drama group will hold weekly Thursday night meetings at the YMCA on Sycamore St.

The summer workshops, which will also be held at the "Y," will cover the fields of speech presentation and make-up. Speech classes will be conducted each Monday night and make-up classes are set for alternate Fridays.

Director John said there will be a small charge for workshop classes for persons who are not members of the drama group.

'Y' Day Camp Opening Set

The Glenlake Park day camp of the Decatur-DeKalb YMCA will begin Monday under the direction of Ed Whitset, A. B. Chapman, "Y" director, said.

The Decatur camp has a full registration of 100 boys for the first two-week period, Chapman said.

Registrations for campers should be made at "Y" headquarters on Sycamore Street in Decatur, the director said. No registrations will be accepted at the camp sites.

AT FERNBANK

Camp Fire, Scout Girls Merge Units

Fernbank Forest buzzed with activity this week as about 200 Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls began a combined day camp, and final plans were laid for the first group of 100 YMCA day campers to begin activities Monday.

Meanwhile, leaders of the Druid Hills Civic Association reported on the group's progress in renovating the 75-acre woodland park.

Mrs. Elmer Becker is in charge of the combined Scout-Campfire Girls day camp operation. Information on the program can be secured by calling VE. 5927 or CR. 8817.

IMPROVEMENTS

John Dill, industrial arts instructor at Druid Hills High School, will head the Decatur-DeKalb "Y" day camp at Fernbank. Two other camping periods will follow the session beginning Monday. Busses will pick up campers at W. D. Thomson, Medlock and Druid Hills Schools each day.

Continuous improvements on Fernbank have been made since early March, when the Druid Hills civic group took as a project maintenance of the recreational area.

About 50 members of the association participated Saturday in a work party and picnic at the forest. Another outing is planned July 11, James A. Mackay, chairman of the project, said.

Reporting on progress made during other Saturday community work parties, Mackay said renovation of the old Harrison home now underway at Fernbank will include repair of the roof, installation of new window glass and restoration of porch floors. Paint has been donated to coat the building's exterior, he added.

TELEPHONE, TOO

A telephone has been installed there, Mackay said, and reservations for cook-out areas built during the work parties can be made by calling EV. 0792. Supervised groups may use the area after dark, he added.

Nature trails are being marked through the forest, and the Atlanta Bird Club has erected "No Hunting" signs throughout the area.

Restoration of the dam and pond at Fernbank will be undertaken later in the summer, leaders said.

About 25 tons of crushed rock will be placed on roads and trails through the woodland.

DEKALB SCHOOL PRINCIPALS CONFER DURING SUMMER LEADERS-WORKSHOP SERIES
L-R: J. E. Cloudis, J. E. Burgess, J. R. Brooks, Curtis, E. G. Dick, V. E. Carne, Smith, Anna L. Britt, Theron O. Anglin, John Cragg

DeKalb Principals Focus On School Administration

The focus of the second week of the DeKalb County school principals' workshop will be on the everyday problems that face a principal in the conduct of his school.

Dr. John Dobson, dean of the College of Education, University of Georgia, will serve as special consultant on the impact of business management on education.

Dr. T. O. Vinson, DeKalb Health Commissioner, will advise the principals on school health problems.

Problems on the keeping of school records, reports, scheduling, and school organization will be part of the roundtable discussions.

Eight high school and 18 elementary principals are taking part in the workshop.

Dr. Doane M. Smith, University of Georgia, is directing the entire operation. Each week special consultants are brought in to discuss particular phases of the program.

School Superintendent Jim Cherry said that the principals have met in groups for the past six years to study common problems.

"But this workshop is the first time four weeks have been set aside for the specific purpose of studying administrative problems," Cherry said.

Business management and human relations will be the topics for the succeeding weeks of the workshop, Cherry said.

The first week of the program was devoted to in-service education. Dr. H. A. Curtis, University of Florida, served as special consultant during this period. He will also serve during the second week.

Cherry said the over-all objective of the workshop is to give every principal the opportunity to learn from other principals, through study and through help from special consultants.

Wife-Beating Charges Increase As Summer Temperature Rises

Hot weather may sap the vigor of most people but court records in Decatur show that it increases the irascibility of husbands.

During the period May 25-June 6 there were six arrests in Decatur on the charge of wife beating, Assistant City Court Solicitor Hubert Morgan said.

"This is at least double the usual number of complaints on that charge," Morgan said.

At the last session of the court, Morgan said, he had only one case to try. This week he has five.

Dr. William E. Hinrichs, former professor of psychology at the Atlanta Division of the University of Georgia, explained the strange behavior of husbands as being due to the frustration and irritability created by the prolonged heat wave. "They feel frustrated at something unknown (the heat) and they vent their irritability on their wives," he said.

When a man's vigor is at its lowest, he is apt to be more touchy than usual, Hinrichs said.

N. Fulton Student To Aid Alaskan Missionary Work

A North Fulton student who wants to "see what missionary work is like" will leave Monday for Fort Yukon, Alaska, where he will help with church and hospital work.

Geno Bogan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie E. Bogan Jr., 597 Martina Dr., N. E., has been active in church work in the Northside and hopes someday to enter the ministry.

Geno will be stationed for two months in Fort Yukon where he will read services, work with young people and assist the clergy in various ways.

Young Bogan is chairman of the non-denominational Student Christian Fellowship that meets every Monday night and does missionary work in the Atlanta area.

As a member of the Cathedral of St. Philip, he has been active in the Young People's Service League and has served as an acolyte at church services.

The 17-year-old will serve as "the Bishop's handyman" to the Rt. Rev. William Jones Gordon Jr., Bishop of the Missionary District of Alaska, according to Canon George H. Murphy of the Cathedral, who helped Geno get the summer assignment.

Lions To Install

New officers of the North DeKalb Lions Club will be installed at 8 p. m. Monday at Robinson's Tropical Gardens. Charles A. Smith, president, will preside at the ladies night banquet celebration.

3d Grammar School Set at Sandy Springs

Fulton County school authorities plan to build a third elementary school in the Sandy Springs area in 1955, Paul West, superintendent, declared.

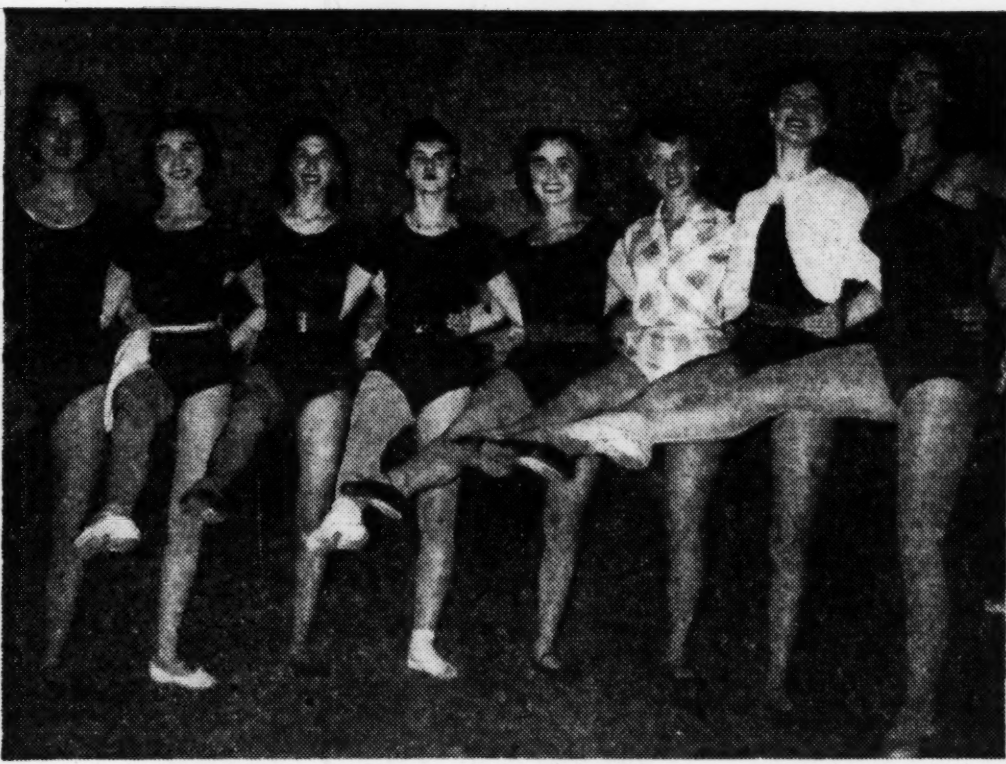

West said a high school on property adjacent to the recreation center in Sandy Springs has already been included in 1955 building plans. The high school would be the first in the area.

West said a recent survey by the Board of Education showed the two present grammar schools, Hammond and Liberty Guinn, will not take care of the rising enrollment in the area.

An addition at Hammond is now under construction and should be ready by September or October according to Norman Aaron, building superintendent. But West said this 6-classroom addition will only take care of immediate growth in the area.

The new grammar school will be located South and West of the Sandy Springs business section, he declared. It would form a triangle with Hammond and Liberty Guinn with the new high school located approximately in the middle of the triangle.

Meanwhile, Aaron said the new addition to Morgan Falls School on Roswell Road north of Sandy Springs should be ready in four weeks. The addition includes a library, combination auditorium and cafeteria and two classrooms. Renovation of the main school building has already started at Morgan Falls, he said.

Women View Student-Made Model of Club

Members of the Garden Hills Woman's Club got their first look at a proposed model clubhouse Saturday at the auditorium of the Georgia Tech Architectural School.

The model clubhouse was built by an architectural class under the supervision of professor Richard Pretz. The class adopted the project after the students learned the Woman's Club planned to erect a clubhouse on Pharr Road adjacent to Bagley Park.

Atlanta contractors graded the students' work Saturday night and the club members conferred with the students who spent 10 weeks on the project.

Mrs. Royal Camp, chairman of the building committee, said the club has already raised $3,000 towards the new building. She declared the club would be in no position to make definite plans until later in the year.

Northside YMCA Day Camp Opens Monday; 200 Are Due

The Northside YMCA Day Camp, largest in metropolitan Atlanta, opens at 9 a. m. at the North Fulton Park camp site.

Some 200 boys are expected to attend the first two-week session, according to Camp Director Bill Huffman. Sixteen counselors will assist Huffman in organizing the camp which is to be based this year on a "back to nature" theme.

Huffman said the boys will be divided into Indian nations and the nation into tribes.

Each nation will build its own camp site and plan its own program with the guidance of the counselor. Separate assembly programs are scheduled for each nation.

Every boy will spend at least one night at the camp and a family night picnic is planned for the last day of each of the two-week sessions. Swimming, horseback riding, crafts and hikes will be taught at the camp, Huffman said.

Meanwhile, a YMCA "Fun Club" is being organized at Sandy Springs for boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 12. The Fun Club will be held four days a week—Monday and Saturday mornings and Wednesday and Friday afternoons—at the Recreation Center in Sandy Springs.

A variety of sports and activities will be offered during the eight-week program. Glenn Wylg and Bill Gohar, both Emory theological students, will direct the club.

Northsiders To Perform In Chastain Park Opera

Nine Northsiders—eight girls and one boy—are among 30 performers selected Tuesday to sing and dance in Opera Under the Stars performances at Chastain Memorial Park Amphitheater.

The northsiders were selected from more than 100 applicants who tried for chorus parts in the five operas to be presented this summer by the Atlanta Opera Co.

The season is scheduled to open with "Desert Song" July 7.

The girls selected for the dance chorus are Nancy Cooper of 2035 McKinley Road, N. W.; Sharon Pratt, 723 Burtin Rd., N. E.; Judy Harris, 109 Lindbergh Dr., N. E.; Marilyn Jensen, 97 Sanderson St., N. E.; Caroline Phillips, 1086 Boulevard Dr., N. E.; Betty Sue Hopton, 1428 Whiteford Ter., N. E.; Jan House of 2105 Fairhaven Cir., N. E. and Judy Hill, Chamblee.

Vernon Storey, 22, of 227 Fourteenth St., N. E., a bookkeeper at the Economy Publishing Co., has been selected to dance with the chorus. He is a native of Albany and has been dancing "ever since I could walk."

Selected National Baton Twirler in 1951, Storey has been dancing with the Corry-Conrad dance studio in Atlanta for the past two years.

Sharon Pratt, sophomore at North Fulton, who says her age is "almost 15" will be the youngest member of the chorus. She has had considerable dancing experience with the Atlanta Civic Ballet.

Nancy Cooper and Judy Hill both teach dancing at Helen Grove's studio in Buckhead while Caroline Phillips teaches dancing at Jackson, and Marilyn Jensen teaches dancing at Hampton and Doraville. Jan House is a dancing instructor at Norcross and Duluth. She graduated from North Fulton last year.

The operettas are sponsored by the Atlanta Opera Co. and managed by the executive committee of the Company. Maurice Seltzer is chairman of the committee and members are Henry Tompkins, Mrs. Chauncey Battey, A. H. Sterne Jr., Mrs. Willard Patterson, D. English Clark and Peter Stelling.

Mrs. Rebekah McClane is associate producer with Valente and Miss Nancy McLarty is in charge of publicity.

Recruiting Figures At Chamblee Decline

The number of Georgians entering the armed forces at the U. S. Army and Air Force main station at Chamblee has dropped from approximately 400 a day in May to about 150 per day in June.

Capt. E. F. Evans, who recently succeeded Capt. Dante Adelizzi as chief medical officer at the installation, said draft quotas have dropped and the Air Force has been limited to the number of men it can induct.

Last year the station processed some 47,000 Georgians and served 137,000 meals to inductees and recruits waiting to be processed.

Club To Get Plans For Sandy Springs

Model Plane Meet Here To Bring 300 Competitors

More than 20,000 spectators are expected to be on hand Saturday and Sunday at the Atlanta-Naval Air Station to watch a dozen northside model airplane flyers compete with 300 flyers from all over the Southeast in the 15th annual Greater Southeastern Model Airplane Championships.

Bleachers are to be erected around the airfield which will be reserved for the model planes on the two days.

For the first time, war bonds will be awarded to winners in the different events. R. H. Elliott, vice president of the Southeastern Model Airplane Association, said 96 loving cups will be awarded and seven huge trophies.

Tommy Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Davis of 3969 Wieuca Rd., N. E., will be gunning for the Arthur Godfrey perpetual trophy for top performance during the year.

CONSISTENT WINNER

Davis, one of the top model airplane flyers in the country, won the trophy last year. In the past four years he has won more than 70 tournament trophies.

New trophies to be awarded for the first time this year include the Jim Walker award for radio racing; the Lockheed Aircraft award for national recognition to a Southern model flyer; and the Waltham Memorial Trophy for the best beginner.

Regular trophies awarded each year include the Eddie Ricken-backer award for best sportsmanship; the Monogram Trophy for the best girl flyer and the Testors Plaque for the best finish on an airplane.

Mayor Hartsfield and Scott Candler will make awards Sunday.

Tommy, who was one of the high scorers last year, will enter four planes in the meet. He has already competed in two meets this year. He won several firsts at the recent Albany air meet and tied for the high point trophy.

PLANS FULL SEASON

He plans to enter meets at Spartanburg, S. C., July 12; Greenville, S. C., July 19; the national meet at Willow Grove, Pa., July 27 to Aug. 2, and the Plymouth International meet, Aug. 19 to 24.

Other competitors include Bill Millican and his wife of Marietta, both of whom are considered first rate flyers; George Perryman, "the professor," who was captain of the U. S. model airplane team two years ago, and Bob Elliott, former winner of the Godfrey trophy.

Bryson Baker, Harry Ballance, Gable Ray, Bill Bussy, D. C. May and Ricardo Mestre also will enter the meet.

Lt. William C. "Dub" Yarbrough, former northsider, now serving with the Navy at Pensacola, will act as meet director.

Cooling Unit Planned for Filter Center

Hot weather has been blamed for the sharp reduction in civilian volunteers at the Air Defense Filter Center in Buckhead and plans are being drafted for an air conditioning unit for the office.

Lt. J. F. Gleason said volunteer attendance at classes and drills has dropped from 350 to around 150. He said although many of the volunteers have gone on vacation, he believed the lack of comfortable facilities in the center had turned many away.

The 15-ton air conditioning unit which will cool the entire building at 2339 Peachtree Road, N. E., should be installed by the end of this month, Gleason declared.

Plans for the unit are being drawn and contractor's bids will be received this week, he added.

West German Educator Coming to Atlanta Friday

A West German editor who risked his life in the publication of "Gone With the Wind" in Germany in 1937 is coming to Atlanta Friday to see "Margaret Mitchell's city."

Heinrich Landahl, now minister of education at Hamburg, supervised the translation of the famous novel while he was in political exile.

As the only representative of the Democratic Party in the last German Reichstag in 1933, Landahl belonged to the anti-Hitler faction in Germany and was not allowed to hold an important position in the country.

He was secretly editor of the Claassen Publishing Co. from 1935 to 1945 and was instrumental in the production of the first German text of the novel.

Landahl will be honored at a tea at the Atlanta Historical Society Saturday afternoon. Stephens Mitchell, brother of Margaret Mitchell, and his wife will entertain the educator at a luncheon Sunday at the Capital City Club.

East Point Council Gets Bids for Two New Pools

Bids on East Point's two new swimming pools Tuesday had been received and awaited tabulation and official approval of City Council and architects before the contract could be awarded.

Mayor Albert A. Roberts of East Point said tabulation will probably be completed later in the week. He said the council will then act on contract awards. He said the bids will be announced after they are tabulated.

Bid specifications call for a White and a Negro pool to be built from a $150,000 bond issue approved in March.

East Point's old white pool on Spring Ave. will be filled in and the new white pool built on ground adjacent to that site. The old pool has been out of use for two years because of inadequate filtering equipment and cracks. It was built about 1935.

New white pool will be 150 feet long and 75 feet wide. It will have a curved radius bottom with tile line markers and a one and a three meter diving board.

Both pools will be constructed of gunite concrete which is sprayed with a hose rather than poured, architects said.

The Negro pool on Granville St. will be 35 feet wide and 75 feet long. It will also have two diving boards and line markers.

According to specifications both pools will have modern filtering plants and ample bathroom space. If the bids are approved the pools should be completed in about 120 days.

Councilman's Son Leads at Blind School

The 16-year-old son of East Point Councilman Otis Stephens graduated as valedictorian of his class at the Georgia Academy of the Blind in Macon this week.

Otis Jr., who has earned laurels as a pianist as well as an outstanding student, plans to enter the University of Georgia in the fall. He will study law.

His sister, Ann, who is 14 years old, is also a student at the academy. Otis Jr. and Ann have appeared as guest pianists at several clubs in the Tri-Cities area in the past both as soloists and as a duo. They have both been blind since birth.

As a student, Otis Jr. has won several medals in district and state academic competition and was cited as outstanding in debating, essay, declamation and on the glee club.

Ann plans to continue studying music after graduation and hopes to be either a concert pianist or a teacher. She will be a junior at the academy next year.

Atlantans
To Attend
Parley

Miss Pauline Trimble, national director of service projects for the Alpha Delta Pi social sorority, will leave this week for the biannual convention of the sorority and an extended trip through Canada and Alaska.

Miss Trimble, who lives at 204 W. John Calvin Ave., is an alumna of Brenau College and a teacher at Ragsdale elementary school in Atlanta.

As director of service projects, she has worked directly with the National Society for Crippled Children. All Alpha Delta Pi charity work is channeled into projects for crippled children.

Last year the sorority contributed $1,000 to the Georgia Society for Crippled Children for use in eight treatment centers and special schools in the state. Two years ago the sorority celebrated its centennial in Atlanta.

Miss Trimble will be accompanied by three other Atlantans: Sue Davis of the University of Georgia chapter, Harriet Parlor of the University of South Carolina, and Elizabeth Hogge of Wesleyan.

HAPEVILLE'S LITTLE LEAGUERS START SAVINGS, GET BONDS
Dollar in the Bank Earns Them League Shirts, Caps and a Regulation Book

Little Leaguers Launch
Thrift Plan in Hapeville

Some 200 Hapeville Little Leaguers opened savings accounts in a Hapeville savings and loan firm Saturday and started salting away money for a college education.

As a bonus for opening an account, they received Little League shirts, regulation baseball caps and booklets listing the rules and regulations of Little League baseball.

The bonus was presented to them by Hapeville Recreation officials, but it was made possible by generous contributions from local residents and merchants.

In addition to opening a savings account the boys also pledged to: 1. Respect their parents, 2. Continue saving for a college education, 3. Go to Sunday school, and 4. Be good sports in the field.

The idea was started by John Lawrence, head of the Hapeville Little League farm teams, and L. H. Cunningham, director of the Hapeville Recreation program. They discussed the project with a local savings and loan company which agreed to permit the boys to open an account for $1 instead of the usual minimum of $5.

DONATED $50

Then the head of the company donated $50 to the recreation program to help pay for T-shirts and rule books—200 of them.

Other local merchants heard about the plan. Some stopped Lawrence on the street, told them they would like to contribute something to the plan, and gave him checks. Others sent him money to help the recreation center pay for the equipment that was to be given as a bonus to all the boys who opened accounts.

By the end of the first week, Lawrence collected enough money to pay for the rule books and T-shirts. A local bank called him and presented him with a check for $120 when he stopped by to talk to the manager.

Another merchant stopped him on the street and offered money.

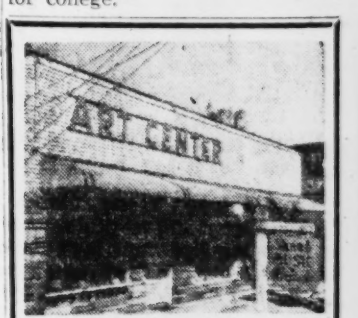

MORE THAN EXPECTED

"We've got more than we need now," Lawrence told him. "Then let's buy them suits," the man said.

"They cost too much," Lawrence said. The man asked if they had baseball caps. When Lawrence said they did not, the man gave him a check and told him to buy them. Within two weeks, there was enough money to furnish caps, books and shirts. None of it was solicited and word of the project had spread simply by conversation.

The farm team members received red caps and white shirts.

Regular team members got blue caps and colored shirts. "We're very enthusiastic about the program," Cunningham said. "Even if all the boys don't keep up the savings a few will. And we'll have achieved our goal if only one manages to save enough for college."

WEST END KIWANIS MEMBERS ADMIRE CALVES DONATED TO "CHAIN"
L-R: Schukraft, Calloway, Johnston and Porter

West End Kiwanians Give 2 Calves in Fayette 'Cow Chain'

A West End Kiwanis Club project designed to aid young farm boys in Fayette County is also helping to improve the dairy cattle industry in the farming community.

The club has donated two purebred registered jersey calves to two boys in the county as part of a "cow chain" sponsored by the Fayette County Kiwanis Club.

The West End club, under the direction of its president, Ed Johnston, answered a call from Harold Nix, vocational agriculture teacher at Fayette County High School, when Nix asked the group to co-operate in the project.

Nix told the West End group that approximately half of the Fayette County youths come to Atlanta after graduating from high school and that "proper molding of these youths would be an advantage to Atlanta as well as to Fayette County."

The club bought two six-month-old Jersey heifer calves at a total cost of $355 and presented them to James Calloway and Kenneth Porter.

Both calves have distinguished forebears in the cattle world and the grandmother of Kenneth's calf, Marks Farm Ophelia, holds the world milk producing record for the class of 14 year olds. She produced 20,000 pounds of milk in one year.

The boys must return to the club the first normal heifer calves produced by their cows and these calves, in turn, will be passed on to other Fayette County boys.

All boys participating in the "cow chain" are Future Farmers of America members and have a set of rules governing the raising of donated calves.

For examples, care and breeding of the animals comes directly under the supervision of Nix and the cows must be bred artificially. Each boy must keep an accurate set of records on his individual animal and each animal must be shown at the county fair unless the agriculture teacher deems otherwise.

When the boy returns the first normal heifer calf to the chain, then the original animal becomes the sole property of the boy with no conditions attached.

The calf project of the West End Kiwanis Club is under the

Moore to Speak at Pim Memorial Dedication

Bishop Arthur J. Moore will deliver the principal address Sunday at the "all day" dedication services of the $150,000 B. Frank Pim Memorial educational building of the Park Street Methodist Church.

The new building is a three-story brick building attached to the church sanctuary and is designed to house the nursery, kindergarten, primary, junior, intermediate and senior departments of the church's Young Peoples Division.

In addition, a new Austin organ, valued at $20,000, has been installed in the church and the choir loft and the Sunday school facilities in the original building have been remodeled. A kitchen equipped with modern facilities and a large dining room have also been provided.

The late B. Frank Pim was pastor of the church at the time of his death and members had raised $1,000 toward the erection of the new building.

Dedication services will be held Sunday with an attendance of 1,000 set as a goal.

The Rev. Peter Manning, pastor, will deliver the 11 a. m. sermon at the annual pledge service. Open house will be observed from 6 to 8 p. m. and an organ concert by Mrs. Edwin E. Aiken will be presented from 7:30 to 8 p. m.

Park Street Methodist Church was founded as a mission in 1878 by the Rev. F. B. Davies, then employed by the North Georgia Conference as a "city missionary."

The mission, called the West End Methodist Church, was then supplied by a series of young pastors, including Bishop Warren A. Candler.

In 1883, the annual Methodist Conference, created a charge and assigned the Rev. Howard L. Crumley as pastor. The group then met upstairs over stores at the corner of Lee and Gordon Streets.

The present church building is now located at the corner of Lee and Park Sts., S. W.
